A Stage, Where Every Man Must Play a Part . . .

A new stage, a new hall and all the trimmings: The Wharton Performing Arts Center (PAC) served its first courses of entertainment Sept. 25, 1982 as it presented the Chicago Symphony and Swedish Sopranist Birgit Nilsson.

The opening ceremonies, occasioned by the presence of namesakes Clifton and Dolores Wharton, culminated from over a decade of planning and preparation. According to ex-MSU President Dr. Clifton Wharton (1970-78) a "ground swell" of support for the Center erupted in 1970. Responding to the call, Wharton said he organized a fund raising committee (Presidents' Club) as the instrument of a $17-million enrichment program for MSU. The committee first gathered donations from the MSU community: administrators, faculty and students, before soliciting funds from national corporations.

Next on the agenda, a group that included members of MSU's Theatre and Music Departments was formed to survey arts centers throughout the country. Wharton said, "In selecting the design I wanted users of the facility to be involved."

The touring MSU task force relayed their findings to the Presidents' Club who then engaged the architectural firm: Caudill, Rowlett and Scott of Houston, Texas to begin designing the Center. It was at this time, 1974, that the Whartons selected the PAC's east campus location on Bogue Street between Shaw Lane and Wilson Road.

Meanwhile the Whartons and other Presidents' Club members continued their relentless capital drive, a campaign that would eventually net more than $7 million. In 1975, old favorites Lena Horne and Tony Bennett gave a "shot in the arm" to the effort, performing a benefit concert sponsored by Dr. and Dolores Wharton.

Though in 1978, Dr. Wharton resigned his post as MSU president to accept a chancellorship at S.U.N.Y., the succeeding president, Edgar Harden, carried on with the national fund drive. Construction began one year later in October, 1979, and the final bricks were laid early in 1982. Current director of the PAC, Kenneth Beachler, summed up the endeavor stating, "MSU has made a brave commitment to the performing arts with the construction of this magnificent new facility."

The new McGoff Festival Stage, a diamond within the facility, is most beneficial to MSU actors and actresses, said Farley Richmond, chairman of the Theatre Department.

Designed after the Shakespearean arena at Stratford, Ontario, the 600-seat Festival stage utilizes a steep rig. Set above and horseshoed around the stage, audiences are brought closer to the drama. Richmond said, "The thrust stage juxtaposes audience and performers," and added, "those in attendance gain a sense of peering in on a little world."

Among the stage's attributes are its proximity to dressing rooms, which allows for quick costume changes; many possible stage entrances including portals beneath the spectators; and a technologically advanced sound board.

The Catherine Hobb Great Hall resides west of the Festival Stage. According to PAC assistant Randy Daniels, the 2,500-seat hall was designed to maximize audience enjoyment. A continental arrangement allows only side-aisle entrances and eliminates obstructed vision, while providing handicapper accessibility. Six gigantic columnar arches support the structure and act as an ascending proscenia curtailing any sound delay those in the balcony might experience.

As a whole the Center proffers several methodical characteristics. Microphones in the dressing rooms ease communication between performers and stage personnel and allow players an ear to the action on stage. Spacious loading docks behind the Great Hall provide stagehands direct access to their setups. And most important, says Emma Daugherty, PAC Assistant Director, the Center can accommodate two major acts simultaneously.

However, at least some members of the MSU community have not embraced the entire Center. Many students and faculty members take issue with the university for naming the Festival Stage after the wife of John McGoff, a man who has both political and financial ties with South Africa's apartheid government.

Kevin Bakerm, MSU student and member of the South African Liberation Committee (SALC), stated, "Having the Festival Stage bear the McGoff name is inconsistent with everything the university has ever said about equality."

After years of organizing and construction, the Wharton Center is a reality. Continued showcasing of professional and local talent, however, faces a severe challenge — Michigan's precarious economy. Though the PAC provides a fine setting for some of the world's greatest performers, its ultimate purpose, to provide for the public, will depend on the public's ability to pay admission. This remains to be seen.

Ride a Painted Pony . . .

The smell of hot popcorn, the gurgle of the soda fountain, an occasional balloon bursting, the giggle of happy children and the faint strains of energetic music — mix these ingredients with a sunny sky, a sleeping dad and a colorful merry-go-round and you've got yourself a wonderful day at the amusement park just waiting to begin.

Amusement parks are everybody's favorite place. Spangles of color float on occasional gusts of air and gaily-dressed gentlemen coerce patrons to take a chance at their favorite game. But with all the fanfare and activity that is known to the amusement parks all over America, there is one aspect that must not be forgotten. The aspect that transforms sticky-fingered kiddies into skilled equestrians, while smiling onlookers wave with delight — what else could be more attracting in the amusement park than the featured carousel.

Carousels have an illustrious reputation for the enigmatic performances they provide for audiences year after year. The Herschel-Spillman Carousel, which was first located at the Lakeside Amusement Park, had such a reputation.

This Herschel-Spillman carousel is one of only six carousels that has spent its entire working life in the state of Michigan. Since 1918 the beautiful menagerie carousel has displayed elaborate hand-carved animals with exquisite detailing. Thirty galloping horses that vary in size, the smallest wagging tails of genuine horse hair, a brightly colored pig, a lovable dog, two gleaming roosters and two trotting zebras once danced patiently across the 40-foot-diameter stage — delighting kids and adults, alike.

The delicately carved bass-wood animals have successfully weathered the climatic conditions, as well as the sometimes overzealous attentions of proud patrons for 65 years. From Flint, to Crystal Lake, to the Michigan State University Museum, the Herschel-Spillman carousel has always had Michigan as its home.

During the summer of 1979 the carousel was donated to the museum at MSU, despite monetary offerings from antique dealers. The Brass Ring Society, an MSU based organization, coordinated by Val Berryman, devote painstaking efforts towards the restoration of the monumental maker of merriment. Anyone can participate in the restoration projects and everyone is encouraged to lend a helping hand.

Berryman states, "Our main objective is to return the carousel to its exact original working state." Though the animals and additional pieces connected with the carousel are in generally good working order, Berryman and the Brass Ring Society want better than good. Pictures and a collection of information on the original working order of the merry-go-round are used as data in recreation of its 1918 condition.

The process of restoration is slow and gradual. Pieces of paint are systematically removed from the animals. The process continues until an original color or design can be discovered. Once this is done, replication of the color or pattern begins. Records are kept whenever an original surface has been uncovered. This delicate procedure must take place with each animal and piece associated with the carousel. You can see that this is no overnight job. It will require a lot of time and effort. Even so, the Brass Ring Society plans to take whatever time is necessary in order to recreate the carousel's past splendor.

The Brass Ring society hopes that eventually there will be a brand new museum erected to house and feature the carousel, but the economical despairs of Michigan have put a halt to such a building for the time being.

So for now the carousel is silent. The music that once set the pace for the spinning gait of the prancing animals is still for now. Her original celebration of colors are camouflaged beneath years of cover-ups, paint-overs, semi-deterioration — but don't worry, those colors will appear again. And once each piece has regained its previous high-status quality, the carousel will again rejoice in the prominence it once knew. It will be the center of attention as it hauls merry youngsters bearing cotton candy, hand-in-hand lovers, and beguiles spectators with its splendor.

MSU Shares Technological Adventure with Country

A technological adventure became reality in East Lansing in September 1982, as the long-planned MSU cyclotron was inaugurated and MSU leaped ahead of world nuclear technology.

The cyclotron, officially the National Superconducting Cyclotron Laboratory (NSCL), according to Director Henry Blosser, is intended for use in studying "the nucleus of the atom in situations which have not been previously accessible."

Dr. D. Allan Bromley, professor of physics at Yale, said that the new MSU cyclotron was an intellectual and technological adventure for the scientists and that discoveries made at the laboratories would affect not only nuclear science, but other sciences as well.

"It certainly is an adventure," Blosser said, "whenever you can step off and do something new. We're very fortunate that we're able to do that."

But the facility isn't restricted to free use by MSU scientists. Researchers who wish to use the cyclotron for their experiments must submit a proposal to the facility's committee which will review the proposals. Then, the community will award the use of the cyclotron on the basis of the expected effectiveness of the suggested research. In the "first wave" of experiments, about 40 percent of them involve MSU personnel, Blosser said.

"It's like it's a national facility, so anyone in the country has access," Blosser added.

Basically, a cyclotron is a producer of accelerated atomic particle beams. Explained simply, a low speed atomic particle beam starts in the center of the cyclotron. It is rotated, sped up and then is sent out toward a target. Once the beam is out of the cyclotron, the researchers can apply the beam to a number of experiments, according to Blosser.

About 95 percent of the research being done at the facility involves nuclear studies. Only about five percent is being done for medical or agricultural knowledge, he added.

Blosser said the facility was being used for basic research, which is looking into the fundamental units of matter. Our technology of today, he explained, is based on basic research of 20 years ago.

"Because it's basic research, we don't know what we can learn," he said.

The MSU cyclotron is the highest energy of any such cyclotron in the world, Blosser said. It is rated at 500 million electric volts and will be part of a coupled pair of cyclotrons at MSU. The other cyclotron is an 800 million electric volt facility under construction, which should be ready for use in 1985.

The idea for the cyclotron came from MSU president John Hannah in 1956, who sent the physics department a memo suggesting that they consider such a program, Blosser said. Blosser speculated that Hannah's motive was that he wanted something to boost MSU's image.

The planning of the facility began in fall of 1973, as studies of the project were begun. Construction of the first cyclotron began in August of 1977, at a cost of $17.8 million. It was partially financed by the U.S. Department of Energy and the National Science Foundation, Blosser said.

"Hank Blosser is to be congratulated," said Bromley, "for the NSCL and for bringing the U.S. to a new scientific frontier. There's an exciting time ahead for us." — Jeff Juterbock

The Game

Harley Seeley

What follows is a real-life, unbiased, random-chance survey of the Michigan State kind.

"Hey clown, what were you surveying?" one might ask.

THE game—meeting and making arrangements. You know, that celebrated pastime which when unbridled and fulfilled, allows the human heart to ascend Everests of emotion.

That's what I'm talking about. This is how people responded to—The Game.

Sammy: "What was the question?"

Angelica: "Shoo, get away."

Annette: "It's like really wicked awesome."

Phil: "It's wicked pissin' good."

Sally: "Boring, boring, boring."

Drexel: "It makes me wanna scream."

Mark: "Be good and you'll be lonesome."

Jesse: "Be lonesome and you'll be down."

Kitty: "Be down and you'll be out."

Jeb: "It's Devilry. Walk with the Lord and lay down your burdensome pride and, if you will, pass me a twenty and a five."

Ellen: "Luvvy duvvy."

Cecil: "If I see you around my daughter one more time, reporter, I'll run you off campus so fast it'll make your Hushpuppies howl."

Peggy: "Heavy duty."

Will: "To play or not to play, that is the question."

Myron: "Looking around this campus, I see there is a lot to be said for positive short-term relationships."

Cecilia: "I saw the movie."

Tom: "I don't know."

Ernest: "I'm not good with girls."

Ernestina: "I'm not good with guys."

Eilert: "The Game is like the neck fur of a Siberian Husky stretched across a Leopard skin."

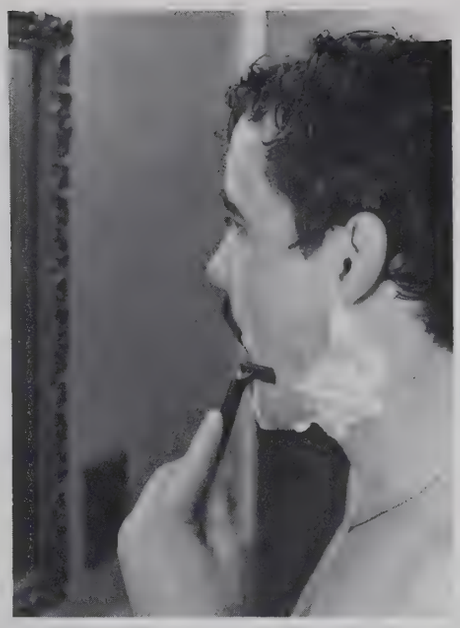
Richard: "No comment."

Rosemary: "Oops."

George: "I think if we stay aggressive and keep mental errors to a minimum, the opposition will be hard-pressed for a victory, and consequently they shall be ours."

Bessey: "Did you know your zipper was down?"

Bill: "Excuse me, can you tell me how to get to the Administration Building?"



Photography by Perry Clark

Elyse: "A la bon heure."

Ned: "Gotta have a good rap—preferably Saran."

Diane: "When Spring's white lilacs open and fragrant trolleys of emotion nip time in the bud . . . then, then forsake the game, for love demands no strategy."

Anne: "Sun and fun, sip the wine and tickle the boys behind their ears—the brutes love it."

Paul: "It's all in the dice."

Karen: "Avoid the rice."

Edith: "I'm sorry, I wasn't listening."

Oedipus: "Who put out the lights?"

Lash: "You're blockin' my rays, sonny."

Mel: "It's a cross between drowning puppies and sunshine on a rainy day."

Darren: "I don't play with just any bean queen, her daddy best have some prime acreage."

Jacqueline: "It sucks."

Maggie: "I lika, lika, like it."

Fred: "Bring on the fresh dancing girls."

Eilene: "Too many ramifications, people don't take us women seriously enough."

Darryl: "You win some, you lose some, some get rained out, but you dress for them all."

Season Ends With Muddy Waters

There was a time Franklin Dean "Muddy" Waters Jr. would have done about anything for Michigan State University.

"I love this place," Waters often said. "There's nowhere else in the country I'd rather be."

It was a love affair that blossomed when Waters was a craggy halfback under the late Biggie Munn. Waters knew someday he'd return to Spartan Town and coach football. "I didn't know how," he said, "but I knew one way or another I'd be back."

On January 29, 1980, Franklin Dean "Muddy" Waters Jr., after 19 years with Hillsdale College and six at Saginaw Valley State College, replaced Darryl Rogers as head football coach.

"This has to be the greatest day of my life," said Waters at his inauguration. Waters shook hands till his arm was numb. He hugged. He cried. He vouched that he would guide Michigan State to the Rose Bowl. It was all very emotional.

On November 14, 1982, the day after MSU defeated Minnesota, the man who bled Green and White was discharged.

"All's I ever wanted to do was coach here at Michigan State," a teary-eyed Waters told reporters at a press conference. "I have a lot of memories. Boy, do I have a lot of memories."

Not all are fond memories. There's a lot of bitter ones.

Like Waters accidentally learning that his five-year contract would end two years prematurely.

"I knew it was coming," Waters said. "I happened to know that I was going to get fired because a friend of mine just happened to hear the vice-president (Ken Thompson) talk about what coaches we could get. That was after the Purdue game."

That annoys the 60-year-old Waters. He doesn't understand why President Cecil Mackey never consulted with him when irate fans and alumni were crying for Waters' scalp.

"They (Thompson and Mackey) never even had the courtesy to say 'Muddy, are you having trouble? Anything I can do to help?' Never. I find that exasperating. I find that just stupid. The man (Mackey) has no PR (public relations).

"He's (Mackey) a helluva guy. Great personality. An intelligent man. Friendly. But he's in an ivory tower. He might as well be in a bottle. His PR is the worst I've ever seen for any executive in my life.

"Don't get me wrong. They're (Thompson and Mackey) not bad guys. I just don't like the way they operate. I think it stinks. They're protecting themselves."

Where was Athletic Director Doug Weaver when Waters' coaching reputation was being smeared? Waters said Weaver was more concerned about defending his own job than coming to Waters' rescue.

"Doug panicked," Waters said. "He reacted to the pressure and didn't know how to handle it. I know that for a fact. He felt that by throwing me to the dogs he would save his own skin."

The meek, mild-mannered man, who constantly turned the other cheek when fans, alumni and the media denounced his skills, saying he was "a minor leaguer in the big leagues," is angered that MSU didn't honor his five-year pact.

"When I came here people said it was going to take me four to five years to turn things around," Waters recalled. "Even the administration said it could take seven years.

"So they give me three years and I'm out. And that hurts. I mean that hurts. That's stupidity."

Waters finished a dismal 3-8 his first season, 5-6 his second year and a nightmarish 2-9 in 1982. The Spartans dropped seven contests — the worst start since 1917 when MSU went winless in nine starts — before they recorded a ho-hum 22-14 victory over unheralded Indiana.

"It was a nightmare of just plain stupid, bad breaks," Waters griped. "There was no way you could have coached against it. Nothing could have been done.

"If we could have turned the breaks around, we could have had a great winning season and everyone would have been just delighted, and I wouldn't have done a single thing differently."

The breaks never came. Waters realized going into the '82 season that if he didn't nurture a winner he'd be unemployed in '83.

"The things I had going against me were astronomical. I knew when I came here that if I didn't win I would be gone. I made a lot of people unhappy when I came here. My hiring was a surprise. A complete shock."

Waters often retreats to his basement and views old game films. He's not bitter. Sure, it bothers him that his coaching career is virtually over after 32 years. It doesn't sadden him, however.

The gleam in his eye is no more. Waters doesn't light up when someone talks about the Spartans.

"I'm very disillusioned with the type of people I worked for. I thought Michigan State was above something like that."

Lords, Swords — But No Plague

Have you ever loitered a moment and imagined yourself in another time, another place . . . only to have a honking horn or a skip in a record jerk you to the present?

The Society for Creative Anachronism (SCA), in its 12th year at MSU, realizes it can't go back. Opting for the next best alternative, and leaving behind niceties like the plague and witch-hunts, the society revives customs, ideals and ways of life of the Middle Ages.

SCA, an international organization, was founded 17 years ago in Berkeley, California. Encouraged by Tolkien readers and medieval enthusiasts, the group spread; today there are four kingdoms throughout the United States. MSU's order is located in the Barony of the Northwoods (Eastern Michigan) and along with eight other states and provinces make up the Middle Kingdom.

Co-seneschal George Perkins, keeper of the MSU castle, attributes the group's success to its diverse interests.

Dueling knights, from which stems much of the group's notoriety, are a common feature throughout SCA's realm. One is not likely to forget the spectacle of fighters sheathed in armor wielding swords and grasping shields. Competition is sharp and keen; however to minimize impaling and dismembering, weapon severity is tempered. Since matches are neither choreographed nor refereed, acknowledgement of damaging or fatal blows is left to he who suffereth them. Thus, honor and discretion are virtues integral to jousting. Knight for the last five years, Sir Elstron of Westhill (Irving Schaefer) explains, "If you fight you fight to win, but a fighter must retain his or her honor." Much of the protective gear worn by combatants — helms, coats of armor plate, and leg armor are fired and fashioned by Sithferth Eardmundson (Tim Oren). Working out of his garage, the armorer devotes his weekends to researching and engaging in his craft.

The "do-it-by-hand" attitude permeates the SCA. In an effort to reproduce an authentic color for garb, Fern de la Foret (Laurie Parker) gathered walnuts and used their husks as a dye. Medieval culinary artist Caellyn Fitzhugh (Rita Berens) adheres to traditional recipes when preparing for royal banquets; her specialties are Chicken Lombard and Perry (pear cider). Reginald of the Horn (Ron Crawford), an Order of the Laurel member (an artists' guild), shapes instruments common to 14th century Europe, including the harp-like psaltery.

Most of the members of SCA take an interest in aesthetically pleasing facets of medieval culture. Other than weekly meetings held in the Tower Room at the Student Union, many join intra-group activities such as plays, madrigals (unaccompanied/lyric poetry), calligraphy and dancing.

In addition to local meetings, SCA attends banner functions like Pensic War and Crown Tournament. The Pensic War, held in August in western Pennsylvania, attracts some 5,000 to 6,000 members of the Eastern and Middle Kingdoms. The event is highlighted by a field war in which 300 fighters from their respective kingdoms employ traditional war formations. The Crown Tournament is a regional festival limited to citizens of the Middle Kingdom. The tournament features a double elimination competition attended by 32 knights who battle for the right to become prince. Following the combat, a mammoth feast is enjoyed.

Why are individuals attracted to SCA? Members replied that they joined for "fun," "the Middle Ages," "the opportunity to meet people." Caellyn Fitzhugh answered, "SCA gave me a chance to be something more than a student."

Comprised equally of males and females, people drawn together by a fundamental attraction to a lost age, SCA allows its members an affinity with the past in our fleeting present.

Strangers In A Familiar Land

The music is playing slowly as couples on the dance floor show off their moves and glow at each other. All around people are laughing and chattering, talking in a language that you know, but slipping in slang phrases you've never heard before. Are they doing it on purpose to confuse you? You don't know anyone here and only came because a friend begged you. Well, now your friend is who knows where and you're all alone. You feel isolated, unwanted and a little scared. Why don't these people come up and talk to you? You're a nice, respectable person, a little different from the overall crowd, but still a nice person to be around. Don't get discouraged, the night will end and you'll be back in your own world in the morning. For many minority students, however, the night never ends. It stretches on and sometimes turn into a four-year nightmare or is cut short by dropping out.

The minority student population at MSU is composed of six groups: American Indian, Black, Hispanic, Chicano, Other Hispanic and Asian American. In the fall of 1982, minority students numbered 3,323 total, which is a mere 8.18 percent of the total student population. Although the minority students may share some of the problems of the majority students, they become more complex when faced by minorities simply because they have so many other pressures to deal with.

Dr. Lee June, head of University Counseling, cites finances and academic conditions as the two main problems facing minority as well as majority students.

"There is a lack of funds for scholarships," he says. "Also some minority students have inadequate high school preparation and underdeveloped study skills."

Dr. Bonita Pope, director of the Multi-Ethnic Counseling Center Alliance, also lists finances and academics as two of the main problems, but adds, "many of these students come from a social situation where they are in the majority, come up here and are the minority. They're not understood. MSU's social climate is not conducive to minorities. It can be very hostile."

Many minority students are forced to live three lifestyles according to Jess Gonzales, director of the Hispanic Aide Program. "They are one person at home, another as a minority and still another as student.

"Hispanics and Native Americans also have not been involved in higher education," he continued. "There are no mentors for them to follow. They are leaping the educational bounds of their parents."

Cultural differences also give many minority students difficulty, especially those from foreign countries.

"Many professors assume all of the students in the class know how the American government works and have an American perspective on things," says Peggy Miller of the International Studies and Foreign Student Office. "Although in general many foreign students do better in the classroom than American students."

This idea of foreign supremacy seems to worry some department heads because their colleges are overflowing with foreign students. For example, the College of Engineering is closed to foreign undergrads and veterinary school might as well be. Caroline Chen, a native of Hong Kong, was majoring in pre-veterinary medicine until she found out that MSU's vet school hadn't accepted a student from a foreign country in approximately six years. "I don't really mind," she said. "I just switched my major to zoology; I like that better anyway. I just wish someone would have told me when I entered the program."

There is one problem that minority students have to contend with that majority students have never had to face — racism, or to give it a nicer sounding name, prejudice.

"It's sad, but there's not much you can do about it," says Pope. "Students pay for classes and are abused."

The University Ombudsman is in charge of investigating these complaints, but is often ineffective. Students are reluctant to report offenses because they are difficult to prove. It boils down to the professor's word against the student's.

Last year President Mackey made a speech calling for more affirmative action programs and pledged more help for minorities. Pope commends the efforts of the administration, but firmly believes MSU has a long way to go.

"There have been some nice statements made, but," she asks, "are these things going to happen? We've lost a great number of black faculty who became dissatisfied — being passed over for promotions and such. People get tired of fighting and unfairness and the climate here is not supportive. There has to be a commitment. Minority students need to know the University supports them."

Florene McGlothian, director of the Black Aide Program, agrees. "Minority students don't feel the administration backing them. It hasn't trickled down yet," she says. "They don't feel part of the University."

June sums his attitude with one of his favorite phrases, "Proclamations are fine, results are the bottom line."

MSU may have a long way to go, but some efforts have been and are presently being made. The MECCA Program and the Minority Aide Program, both started in 1969, have been copied by many other universities, although there are no other programs like the Minority Aides in Michigan. A new position is being created, Assistant Vice-President for Minority Concerns.

Both Jesse Gonzales and Florene McGlothian feel that some sort of cultural awareness course should be required.

"Management 417 is a good course," states McGlothian. "It touches on all minorities and Prof. Stark is excellent."

"Every class should have some sort of minority unit; where appropriate," Gonzales adds.

"If information were included, then we wouldn't have a problem," says McGlothian. "And if minorities were hired then we wouldn't need this [Minority Aide] program."

Prof. Stark offers the best advice in the syllabus for his Management 417 class. "Everything makes sense, if only we'll do the mental work of making sense of it; and having made sense of something, we can live with it better and maybe even make it better to live with."

The Evolution of the Spartan Species

Picture this: MSU students toiling in the field surrounding the university, mandatory drill practice each afternoon, compulsory chapel attendance every morning at 6 a.m. ... this and much more comprised the average day of a male agricultural major at the Agricultural College of The State of Michigan in the 1860s. "Aggies," as the students called themselves, were not allowed the relaxed lifestyle that we enjoy today. Their days were strictly planned and regimented with little time for extracurricular activities. The most radical differences were the noticeable lack of women students, tuition payments and a variety of specialization. The male students were forced to participate in three hours of daily manual labor in the fields of the college to pay their tuition expenses, as well as to provide them with a comprehensive knowledge of farming. As quoted in Michigan State: The First Hundred Years by Madison Kuhn, President T. C. Abbot claimed that such forced labor prevented the men from forming a "disinclination, if not inability, to perform the work and duties of the farm."

The men resided in one house; dormitories and fraternities were viewed as "militating against the best purposes for which American boys are supposed to be sent to college." (Kuhn). The students arose at 5:30 a.m. to attend mandatory chapel services; breakfast was served at 6 a.m. and the first labor shift was sent to the field immediately thereafter. They were relieved at 9:30 a.m. by the second group of workers; at 12:30 p.m., all the students lunched together and then attended four hours of classes in the afternoon. The classes they took were mandatory; no electives were allowed. In 1862, it became mandatory for seniors (who were, incidently, the only persons allowed to sport mustaches) to take classes in Infantry Drilling and Military Hygiene in preparation for the day when they would fight in the Civil War. After the war ended, these classes were still required and men had to be proficient in drill in order to graduate.

The little free time the men did have was spent fishing, rowing and swimming in the Red Cedar River, which was obviously cleaner back then! Lights-out was at 10:00 on weeknights, and the president of the college did rounds every night. Once every two weeks, student officers examined each room for bedbugs; if found, the students occupying the room "shall be required to take immediate measure for their extirpation." (Kuhn).

J-Hop with Buddy Morrow—1958

Like today, the renamed State Agricultural College suffered from economic problems. The University of Michigan seized this opportunity to attempt to get rid of the college and thus began the friendly rivalry that still exists between the two schools. A University of Michigan official of the 1870s is quoted as saying: "The college is a failure and a disappointment. Join it to the university and use the buildings for a reformatory school."

However, Jonathan L. Snyder, who took over after Abbot's term ended, believed in the future of the Michigan Agricultural College. In 1896, women were permitted to enter the college. Snyder decreed that "a girl has a right to an education as precisely adapted to a woman's work as is a boy's preparation to a man's work." A woman was allowed to take a curriculum of cooking, physiology and hygiene, since these were considered more suitable for the agricultural woman than Latin, French, history or literature. The 1920 Wolverine states: "The paths of most female pilgrims on this road to knowledge turn in at the Home Economics gate — a gate that leads to the making of better women as citizens, as teachers and as the Help Mate to man, for which they were created."

A women's social life was equally restricted. She was permitted to be out until 11 p.m. four times per term and it was necessary for her to secure permission from the school and obtain a chaperone in order to attend each party. The presence of women did improve the social life for the men, who became noticeably neater in appearance and more refined in manners.

The latter part of the 19th century and early 20th century saw remarkable change at the Michigan Agricultural College. Chapel attendance became voluntary; electives were allowed in the junior or senior year and the fields of study expanded beyond merely the agricultural sciences. With the increasing enrollment, it became necessary to establish dormitories which were separate for men and women.

Under the presidency of Robert S. Shaw, students were allowed slightly greater liberties. They could stroll about campus unchaperoned, attend military dances and the annual Junior Prom. Undergraduates began to discover the idea of 'partying,' although since Shaw attended the parties, it can be safely assumed that their idea of partying was considerably different than today. (Can you imagine Cecil Mackey at a dorm party?)

As the century progressed, the rules became even more relaxed. In 1941, students had lights-out at 11:30 p.m. and were allowed to sleep until 7:30 a.m. Smoking was finally allowed on campus, although not in academic areas. If a student had six to twelve absences in all classes, then only one credit would be dropped rather than being failed from that class. Following World War II, women were finally permitted more of a role in campus life. With the men away fighting, women took control of campus organizations, worked in "Victory" gardens and bought war bonds at the Student Union.

In 1962, the first coed dormitory was built at Michigan State University. The Case complex was divided into a two-part building, with men in the North building and women in the South. The doors between the two buildings were closed and locked at midnight and it was expressly forbidden for a person to entertain a member of the opposite sex in his/her room.

Five name changes and over a hundred years later, the MSU "Spartans" have a considerably different lifestyle than their predecessors. It is difficult to imagine President Mackey doing rounds every night in the dorms, or one having to secure a chaperone for a fraternity party! Try to picture your R.A. checking your room every week for bedbugs! Judging from this, who can predict what student life at Michigan State will be like one hundred years from now?

The Pit and the Pendulum

"It was the best of times, it was the worst of times," ... it was registration time. — Charles Dickens

It starts with the trek across campus to pick up those handy dandy section reservation cards. This will probably be the first of many lines you will encounter. They move fairly quickly, so this step is usually a breeze — providing someone doesn't have a screaming fit when he or she is handed a blank section card. These hysterical people, murmuring, "the pit, the pit," tend to gum up the works a bit, so if it happens to you, step outside and have your fit.

The next move in the registration game is trudging over to the Men's I.M., or the I.M. West as it is now called, and joining the line to enter. The length of this line varies. If you've been a good little boy or girl and come at your correct time, the wait shouldn't be more than a minute or two. If you decided to go for that extra hour of sleep or show up two days late, the line can be quite awesome. (I personally have seen it go from the entrance doors all the way around to the side of the building.)

Now the fun really starts. Once inside the I.M., still more lines beckon, cards have to be filled out and fees assessed. If you were one of the chosen who was smiled upon and blessed with a complete schedule, all this should take about half an hour and then you'll be on your merry way, a few thousand dollars lighter.

If you are among those who had an asterisk next to their name on their reservation card, it's on to the pit, or class card arena, for the refined among us.

How to describe the pit? At the start of registration, it actually does resemble a gym with tables set up around the walls for each department. Things are fairly calm and only a few students are meandering about. At registration's peak, it comes closer to resembling the floor of the New York Stock Exchange. I have often watched in awe from the window above as people rush back and forth, while others wander aimlessly, looking for a department that seems to have disappeared.

After this, of course, there is still the not so trivial matter of payment. Altogether, it takes, on the average, one and a half hours to register if going through the pit. This is just an average mind you, sometimes it is quicker and sometimes longer. (I've heard horror stories of three and four hours.)

"Oh the times they are changin' " ... and so is registration. — Bob Dylan

Yes, there actually might be a better way of registering — with computer terminals.

"The system we have is relatively efficient," said Dr. Lou Anna Kimsey Simon, assistant provost for general academic administration.

"If people come during their specified time, then there really isn't a problem," she said. "It's the people who wait until the last minute that have to wait the longest."

Dr. Simon is in charge of investigating the feasibility of switching MSU over to computer scheduling. She seems fairly confident that the change will be made in about three years.

"When you switch to computer scheduling, it affects more than just the actual registration process," Simon noted. "Drops and adds and student records would probably be turned over to computers also."

The university would probably conduct the change in a number of steps, with a mail-in payment system being the first alteration, according to Simon.

"Even if we do go to terminal registration, it still probably wouldn't save that much time; for the people who come on time," Simon said.

What she is referring to is the fact that students will still have to wait in line to use a terminal. This would most likely take about one half-hour.

"Where it will help will be with the students that wait until the last day of registration to come in and pay," Simon said. "There's always lines at the fee tables on the last day. The mail-in payment process would cut down on those."

What it won't cut down, Simon noted, are the problems of getting into a course with high demand.

The cost of buying an existing computer program is approximately $3 or $4 million.

Computers would also help enhance registation's image.

"The perception issue is very important," said Simon. "Students don't like the idea of being herded.

"If they know they only have to wait in one line instead of four or five, it's definitely going to help."

They say the grass is always greener on the other side of the fence, but is registration?

Down in Ann Arbor, the Wolverines do all their scheduling by computer and have a mail-in payment plan. They usually have to wait about 30 minutes to get a terminal and they have a mail-in payment plan. Sounds nice, eh?

Further south, at Ohio State University, the students register on terminals and their fee cards are mailed to them. For schedule changes however, the students must go to their college where a change ticket is filled out. Then they go to a large room where all the closed sections are hung on a large paper board. Shades of the pit!

Lansing Community College has telephone registration. Students call in and then their class choices are entered into a computer. They can go to the school and pay, or they can mail the money in.

Over at Harvard, students pay one set fee before the term starts, no matter how many credits they take. In addition, each student at Harvard "is personally registered by a counselor." Well, with all the tuition they pay, they probably expect it.

At Purdue, the students register on terminals and it takes about 15 minutes. They do have one small drawback to their system, though. When students register, they simply register for the class. They have no idea of what section they are getting. Purdue has classes that start at 7:30 a.m. and classes that meet on Saturday. MSU is starting to look better and better.

Wisconsin's registration process gets "the most legwork award." They have no pre-registration period. Students have five days to register before the next term's classes start. They must get their advisor's signature on their schedule and, if they want to sign up for a class that is likely to be crowded, beginning econ or math for example, they have to go to an assignment committee in each department and get their approval to take these classes. If they walk over to the economics department, sign up for an econ class, go to the math department, try to sign up for a math class, but find that it conflicts with their econ class, they have to go back to the economics department and start all over again. The average time to register is 2-3 hours. And you thought we had it bad. Next time you're standing in line at registration, think of the poor Badgers and consider yourself lucky.

The Selling of MSU

The scene has been repeated in so many movies it's positively ludicrous to think of it happening here in East Lansing: the virtuous young woman is suddenly left alone in the world due to heartbreaking circumstances and must provide food and shelter for her five younger siblings. Not knowing what to do, she sells herself and becomes the prostitute with a heart of gold and is loved by everyone. The movie makes millions of dollars and leaves everyone with a warm glow.

Cut to East Lansing. MSU President Cecil Mackey is watching his university crumble bit by bit because of budget crunches. What to do? Hock the silver? No, hmm . . . how about selling Sparty; now there's a catchy idea!

And so it has come to pass. After reading an article about how other schools were trademarking their symbols, Mackey put his researchers on it and rights were applied for in October. The trademarks were approved in January and an Office of University Licensing was created. Jan Curschman, manager of University Licensing, said it is not really that revolutionary an idea.

"About 150 schools are into licensing, including the University of Michigan," she said.

The trademarking is retroactive, so any manufacturer who was selling something with a MSU logo on it had to go to Curschman and get approval for the item before continuing to produce it.

"We want to make sure it's a quality product and upholds the integrity of the University," she said.

Curschman said that there has been limited negative feedback because the policy is equal in its treatment of both on- and off-campus stores.

"It hasn't cut back on the variety of products at all," said Curschman. "In fact, it seems as if people are getting more creative. We've got some great new products coming out soon."

Roger Foster, assistant manager of the MSU Bookstore, said that it is really too early to tell if the licensing has brought a drop in products or an increase in consumer prices.

"We really haven't ordered any new merchandise yet," he said.

And has the packaging and selling of Sparty brought in the expected riches?

"Right now it's too early to compute how much money will come in," Curschman said, "but the University gets 6.5 percent of the net selling price (the price that the retailer pays) for the product."

The money goes into the General Scholarship Fund and the Inter-Collegiate Athletic Fund.

"A lot of times the amount of money people spend on these items depends on the reputation of the school and its sports teams, especially the football team," Curschman said. (Maybe the new uniforms George Perles is designing will improve the team and sales.)

Enforcing the licensing is not too big a problem, according to Curschman, because most of the larger manufacturers and retailers are used to dealing with licensing regulations, and also a large number of the products are sold here in East Lansing.

And will virtuous Sparty save the University by making people pay for his services? By all accounts it is still too premature to tell, but the outlook is good and even if the University isn't saved, he will still bring some badly needed extra cash.

"My most rewarding experience has been accepting this job at MSU."
— George Perles

George Perles is a busy man. His energy and enthusiasm for his job as new head football coach at MSU, seem inexhaustible. His hopes of MSU becoming the best college football team in the nation seem inescapable. And his determination seems never-ending.

"I'm a positive person," George says. "It has always been my nature to work hard to achieve my goals."

George says that he has wanted to coach for as long as he can remember and wouldn't change his career for anything in the world. "I've never had the desire to do anything else with this much enthusiasm."

He is also enthusiastic about his family and spends what little spare time he has with his wife, building and furnishing their new home. Only one son remains close to home and plays football at MSU. Another son plays football at Kent State, while two others remained in Pittsburgh.

Although George once coached professional football, he says he's happy coaching at the college level and has had some of his most memorable moments with college teams.

"My second most rewarding experience was winning the Super Bowl with Pittsburgh in 1974."

Winning isn't the only thing that makes George happy though. That's only part of it, he says. Seeing a positive change within a player gives the same kind of satisfaction.

"It's always a good feeling to see players improve on grades and the physical make-up of the team."

It's always a good feeling to have a man like George Perles coaching for our side of the game.

"Probably the thing that I have learned the most at MSU is discipline."
— Ron Scott

His list of achievements seem endless: MSU's Most Valuable Player, MSU's Outstanding Rookie of the Year, goalie for the All-American Team and one of the 10 finalists for the prestigious Hobie Baker award. The list goes on.

"Before I came here I was just an average player," says Ron Scott. "Now it seems like everything has jelled."

MSU Hockey Coach Ron Mason attributes Ron's success to his ability to think while on the ice.

Ron also thinks while in the classroom and his 3.76 grade point average in accounting reveals that. He says it takes a lot of discipline to maintain good grades.

"When you spend four to five hours a day in hockey practice, all that is left is the odd hours to study with. I just tell myself it's got to be done."

It's that kind of determination that will enable Ron to pursue his accounting career during the off-season. He hopes to establish his career in order to have something to ease into when he finally decides to quit playing for good.

John Nowak is a believer in people. Despite the controversy that rose after being removed from Delta Sigma Phi in 1981, John feels that he learned a great deal about the sensitivity of people.

"People hurting other people is senseless," John says. "It seems like wherever we look in society, all we see are groups fighting other groups. What it should really be is people loving people."

John was removed from the fraternity during his sophomore year when the administration became aware that he was gay. John says the reaction to the decision was not limited to the university. The issue traveled nationwide in newspapers and magazines alike.

John, now director of the Lesbian/Gay Council, says the outcome of the decision has caused more positive reactions than negative. He says he still receives letters of support from young and old people alike, from inside and outside the university.

After graduation next year, he plans to move to Washington, D.C. to study law and hopefully get involved with politics. He says he wants to continue his efforts to establish not only gay rights, but human rights in general. To him, "helping others is what life is all about."

MSU has it's own resident concert pianist. You may have attended one of his concerts at the Wharton Center. Or you may have heard him play with the Chicago Symphony. Perhaps you've seen him in South America, when he conducts his bi-summerly concert tours. If you haven't seen Ralph Votapek, you should—he's good.

Ralph says he began playing the piano when he was nine years old, after a fleeting interest in both the cello and the Hawaiian guitar. Several years later, he attended the Juilliard School of Music, where he met his wife, Tina.

In November, the Votapeks will be celebrating their 20th anniversary. Ralph says that Tina, and their three children, are the most valuable parts of his life. After that, his piano follows closely behind.

When he's not giving a concert or spending time with his family, Ralph teaches private lessons, something he says gives him a sense of security. "One feels tense and has doubts about his ability when going on stage. It's nice to feel the stability that comes from teaching."

According to Ralph, his most rewarding experience has been playing with what he terms the best symphony he has ever performed with, the Chicago Symphony.

Even now, after all he has already accomplished with his talent and all the notoriety he has achieved, Ralph Votapek has but one goal—"To become a better pianist."

"It's like electricity that gets into you once you're up there on the platform . . ."
— Leonard Rall

Dr. Leonard Rall has made his students smile, laugh, throw oranges and sing the Spartan fight song for over 33 years.

The recently retired professor of economics, well-known across campus for his comic antics and crazy theatrics says he loves to "put on a show."

Rall's classroom becomes a stage, his lecture a performance, and his students the supporting cast as he teaches the fundmentals of supply and demand, opportunity cost and the perils of inflation.

"You can't just tell stories and jokes to make a class interesting," says Rall. Kids want to be identified and recognized as individuals — so I bring them on stage and we have a bit of fun."

His students often find themselves singing the fight song during football season, throwing fruit at a dummy Wolverine linebacker before the Michigan game and joining Rall on stage to accept kisses, flowers and potted plants.

"The real key is interacting with students, getting to know them by name and recognizing them — whether it be for a birthday, for accomplishing something important, or even for no particular reason at all," says Rall. "I know I get a big kick out of it and I think my students do, too."

"Higher education is the door opener to anything and lately, because of the costs, it's become out of reach to a lot of people. I hope to make some contribution to change that."
—Bobby Crim, MSU Trustee.

If Bobby Crim could have things his way, education would be free for everyone.

"But since that's impossible," says the MSU trustee, "my ideal is to improve the availability and quality of higher education at a price everyone can afford."

Crim, speaker of the Michigan House of Representatives for eight years, was elected to the Board of Trustees this fall. Active in state government for 16 years, the veteran politician has come to be known as pragmatic, decisive, and dedicated to improving education.

"Higher education has always been important to me," he says, explaining how he became interested in a position on the Board after he left the legislature. "I came from an extremely poor family and only through the GI bill did I have the chance to go to college."

Crim's firm belief in the necessity of education and the value of hard work took him from the small Missouri farm where he was raised to a position as one of the most powerful Democrats in Michigan politics.

And, he admits, he couldn't have done it without his education. "Along with my seven colleagues, I hope to have some influence in ensuring everyone can have the same chance."

"MSU sports will get better." — Clinton Thompson

Clinton Thompson really has a heart for sports. He has to as he is the coordinator for over 400 athletes on the 24 MSU teams. He also teaches three classes at MSU about training, the profession he became interested in while a student at the University of Texas in the early 60s.

In 1964, Clinton came north to MSU eager to apply what he had learned in the South. Since that time, he has experienced some of his most rewarding moments, times when MSU teams were declared the best in the nation.

"I've been here a long time," he says, "and I've seen good ones come and go."

Clinton doesn't just help others get into shape, he also takes part in his own conditioning by running three to six miles a day. He also enjoys playing paddleball and racquetball when he can and has entered several 10-kilometer races. There is one sport though, that stands above all the rest.

"I really love to scuba dive," he says, "but I have only been able to do it two or three times."

It isn't the sports that makes Clinton happy though. Nor is it being on the winning side. He says that it is much deeper than that.

"What really makes me happy is when I'm satisfied with myself."

After 19 years as our sport coordinator, we can be sure that Clinton is happy at MSU.

"I kinda go along with what Socrates said, 'An unexamined life isn't worth living.'" —Claudena Skran

What's a Rhodes Scholar really like? Claudena "Dena" Skran, one of 32 winners nationwide and the second MSU woman in two years to win the prestigious Rhodes Scholarship, is actually more interested in other people. She spends a great deal of her time working with international students here on campus and says that she is interested in international things.

It was that interest that led her to the job as a State Department intern in the U.S. Embassy in New Zealand last summer. An International Relations major, Dena says that her position in the embassy was one of her most rewarding experiences because she was able to see international politics at work rather than simply in the textbooks that she has read for four years.

Dena's also introspective, suggesting that if she could change anything about life, she might simply stop the world for 10 minutes and have everyone examine their lives. "I kinda go along with what Socrates said, 'An unexamined life isn't worth living.'"

Actually, it is none of these things that Dena values most in life. To Dena, friendship holds that highest honor. "I think a person who has a few good friends is probably the richest person in the world."

It's people like Dena, who whether they are studying at Oxford University or Michigan State, will never taste the bitterness of poverty.

"The school will miss his sense of humor but we predict he will become a burr under the saddle of the community at large."

Zolton Ferency is a man of many roles.

East Lansing lawyer, Ingham County commissioner, self-described socialist, creator of the Human Rights Party, perennial gubernatorial candidate . . . and, of course, associate professor of criminal justice at MSU.

The veteran politician, who graduated from MSU in 1946, says coming to teach at his alma mater was the fulfillment of a lifelong desire.

"I'm very pleased that I made the decision to retire from private practice to teach," says Ferency. "It is far more rewarding and I really enjoy it."

With his quick wit, salty humor and swashbuckling image, Ferency has gained extensive attention from the press and on college campuses during his political campaigns. "The public knows me inside and out by now," he says of his three decades in Michigan politics. "Isn't my endurance remarkable?"

During the summer she spent five to seven hours a day practicing. She continued the sport when most competitors quit. Her dedication has earned her the title of Senior Grand National Champion. Now, according to the rules of the National Baton Twirling Association, she is forced to retire from competition and must judge others in her skill of baton twirling.

Her ability does not go unnoticed by Spartan fans. Each home football game Lisa stands before thousands of people, twirling her baton to the beat of the marching band.

"I don't even realize that people are out there," Lisa says. "I've been twirling a baton for so long that it is just a part of me."

In other ways, those same people have made a major difference to Lisa since coming to MSU from Chicago two years ago. She says that while she was growing up, much of her time was spent with her mother and older sister, practicing for baton twirling competitions and benefit shows. Not much time was left to make friends or build relationships. That changed when she came to MSU.

"I've learned to interact more with other people," Lisa says. "I've made some good friends and am more independent than I have ever been."

"The first time I went up in a private plane I decided to make a career out of it" — Lori Melling

Lori Melling is reaching for the sky. The MSU senior will join the U.S. Navy in June as an aviation officer candidate — one of two women in the country selected this year for pilot training.

Lori, who will graduate with a dual major in mechanical engineering and theoretical and applied mechanics, also has concentrations in mathematics and Russian.

"I think having an engineering background as well as my private pilot's license really helped in the selection," says Lori, acknowledging that the competition is really tough.

She decided on a career in military flying because, "I didn't want to sit at a desk all day designing things and I wasn't interested in commercial flying." After her training is completed, Lori must serve at least five years as a military pilot.

The physical and mental demands of military flying is what Lori believes makes it the most challenging kind of flying. "You are pushed to exceed even your own limits," she says. "There is absolutely nothing else like it."

After 28 years, Jim Renuk found his own voice—and for the first time in his life is able to speak up for those who can't.

With the help of a $16,000 computerized voice box, Renuk, who has cerebral palsy, became the first person in history to testify before a U.S. congressional committee using such a system.

"A lot of people who need systems like this don't know about them," Jim says. "It was very exciting to go to Washington. I hope I will have helped others by going and talking about mine."

The same determination and spirit which took Jim to Washington took him to Denmark last summer to compete in the International Cerebral Palsy Games where he earned a gold and silver medal in swimming and soccer. He will also be competing in the national games in Texas in 1983.

Jim's system, designed by MSU's Artificial Language Laboratory, is operated by pushing a control stick on his wheelchair to compile words, letters and symbols from computer pages of information.

"I'm thankful we have such technology today because it has allowed me to experience a part of life I had never known," Renuk said.

A student at MSU since 1974, Jim has earned two bachelors degrees and is working towards a graduate degree in physical education.

Men's Basketball

One could have heard a mouse gnaw away at a popcorn kernel when the brawny youngster—whose mug bears a strong likeness to James Cagney—stumbled to the floor, wincing in pain as he clutched his knee.

Scott Skiles, the gutsy guard who earned a starting job four games into the 1982-83 campaign, had been accidentally tripped by an Ohio State player.

Was this the closing of a could-be sweet story? One of the most sought after basketball players in the country gets injured in his first season of collegiate ball?

MSU trainers and court-side doctors rushed to the 6-1 Skiles. Minutes later, Skiles was on his feet, carefully making his way to the Spartan locker room.

About an hour later, Skiles would amass a game-high 35 points to spark MSU to an emotional 101-94 overtime victory over the Buckeyes before a small (7,641) gathering at Jenison Field House.

"At first I thought my knee cap had popped out of socket," Skiles recalled. "I thought I would end up sitting out the rest of the game."

From that night on—until the Spartans met Fresno State in the National Invitational Tournament—MSU was enroute to its best season since "Magic" Johnson and friends led the Green and White to a national title in 1979.

"It was the turning point in our season," said MSU Coach Jud Heathcote of the game with Ohio State. "It turned the season around a little for us."

The Spartans, led by the consistent play of Skiles and the improved play of center Kevin Willis, went on to win four of their last five Big Ten games. An immense turnabout from State's lowly 4-8 conference mark during the months of January and February.

MSU finished the regular season 16-12 overall and 9-9 in the Big Ten, good enough to catapult the Spartans into the NIT. A far cry from the NCAAs, but not shoddy for a team that dropped four straight games at one point during the year.

Jud's gang opened NIT play with an exciting 72-71 win over Bowling Green. A crowd of 10,044 witnessed the Spartans hold a slight 36-35 half-time advantage. Patrick Ford led the Spartans with 17 points followed by Willis with 16. Skiles added 10.

The streak came to an embarrassing halt when MSU met Fresno State in second-round NIT action.

Down 52-33 at half-time, MSU dropped a 72-58 decision before 8,839 frustrated fans at Jenison. Skiles and Vincent each bagged 17 points for MSU which could never get into gear against fast-breaking Fresno State.

"Overall, it was a decent season," said Heathcote. "It was a disappointing ending but a decent season."

Disappointments:

- Ben Tower averaging a meager 4.7 points a game. Not what Heathcote expected from the 6-8 forward who is yet to have a "good" season with the Spartans.
- MSU suffering a 75-57 loss to Iowa in its last regular-season match.

There were some bright spots however.

- Willis leading the Big Ten in rebounding (10.2 a game) and field goal percentage (.600). Willis also maintained a 14.3 scoring clip, upgrading his 6.0 average in 1981-82.
- Vincent leading the Spartans in scoring (16.7) and steals (44). Vincent was voted team MVP.
- Skiles dishing out a team-high 146 assists. He was also second in steals (33) and third in scoring (12.5). Skiles was MSU's primary three-point gunner, hitting 25 of 50.
- Skiles suffering no more than a bruised knee when he was knocked to the floor.

And that alone overshadows any disappointment in 1982-83.

1982 Spartan Football — A Year to Remember?

It's unlikely that Michigan State University football fans, or any college football enthusiast, will forget the season of '82.

Not because MSU had a fabulous team. Quite the contrary. MSU finished a miserable 2-7 in the Big Ten and 2-9 overall.

The '82 Spartans will be remembered for posting the school's poorest record since the 1917 season when MSU went winless in nine starts. The '82 season marked MSU's utmost horrid showing in the Big Ten since the infallible Duffy Daugherty went 0-5 in 1958.

The '82 Spartans will be remembered for losing to Northwestern.

The '82 Spartans will be remembered for amassing 123 yards in penalties in their homecoming loss to Purdue.

The '82 Spartans will be remembered for halfback Aaron Roberts griping to sportscaster Bob Page "That Muddy (head coach Muddy Waters) can't coach, and as long as he's here we won't win."

The '82 Spartans will be remembered for 'choking' in the closing minutes of tight contests. Six times MSU lost after either being ahead or failing to capitalize on promising scoring opportunities.

And the '82 Spartans will be remembered for Waters getting fired.

"It's almost as if somebody had written a script," told a teary-eyed Waters days before George Perles was named head coach. "I've coached 42 years and I never, in all those years, have gone through a season like this one. I've never seen anything so freakish happen in the fourth quarter, the final minutes of the game, that happened to us. It was a nightmare of just plain, stupid breaks."

Remembering the '82 Spartans:

Illinois 23, MSU 16: Quarterback John Leister had perhaps his finest game of the season, comprising 16 of 37 passes for 257 of MSU's 431 total output. Flanker Otis Grant was a human vacuum cleaner, snagging eight passes for 142 yards. MSU mustered enough offensive fireworks to upend the Illini and Champaign Tony Eason. But MSU botched two fourth quarter drives including an incomplete pass in the Illini endzone with 1:18 left in the game.

Ohio State 31, MSU 10: Knotted up at 10, the Spartans bobbled a punt at their own 35. Five plays later, OSU scored and for all practical purposes the game was over and so was MSU's chance of ending a six-year losing drought against the Buckeyes. The MSU offense sputtered for a lowly 222 yards while the Bucks erupted for 314.

Miami 25, MSU 21: MSU stopped the Hurricanes four times from the one and three times from the two yardline before Mark Rush scored what proved to be the winning score at 1:04. The Spartan offense, however, wasn't so noble in the final moments. MSU failed to score on first and 10 at the Miami nine. On top of that, Leister was intercepted three times — one returned for a touchdown — MSU lost two fumbles and kicker Ralf Mojsiejenko shanked field goal tries of 48 and 23 yards. Spartan linebacker James Neely was credited with 30 tackles.

Notre Dame 11, MSU 3: The Irish, who haven't bowed to MSU since 1975, won out easily in this battle of the defenses. Notre Dame came into the contest as the nation's top defense, halting the opposition to a mere 26 yards rushing. And MSU didn't spoil things, gaining a meager 140 total yards. The Spartan defense was, majestic, too, but they couldn't stop Mike Johnston from booting three decisive field goals.

Michigan 31, MSU 17: Defensively or offensively, MSU was never in the game. The Wolverines led 21-0 before Mojsiejenko split the uprights from 31 yards before halftime. Leister completed 32 of 45 passes for 272 yards, setting a new MSU pass record, previously held by Ed Smith with 27. The noisy gathering of 106,133 at Ann Arbor was the largest assemblage ever for an MSU-UM game.

Wisconsin 24, MSU 23: The fourth quarter blues struck, again. Leister marched MSU 79 yards on 11 plays en route to hitting Ted Jones with a seven-yard scoring strike with 13 seconds left in the game. Rather than go for the tie, MSU went for broke and came up empty-handed. Badger safety David Greenwood intercepted the two-point conversion pass meant for Grant. The Spartans were penalized 12 times for 104 yards including a crucial five-yard offside call which iced a pass play that would have propelled MSU to the Wisconsin 25.

Purdue 24, MSU 21: Playing before a homecoming crowd of 66,707, MSU allowed a 21-17 edge to slip away in the final minutes. Quarterback Scott Campbell engineered the Boilermakers 92 yards before the shifty Campbell scored on a one-yard plunge with 1:30 remaining in the game. MSU, summoned with 123 yards worth of infractions, was whistled for pass interference and having too many players on the field to aid Purdue's winning drive.

Bill Brooks

MSU 22, Indiana 14: The foot of Mojsiejenko — kicked field goals of 34, 34 and 28 yards — and the arm of the debuting Dave Yarema — helped MSU snap a pathetic seven-game losing streak. Yarema connected on 10 of 18 passes for 116 yards including a 35-yard TD pass to Grant.

Northwestern 28, MSU 24: Quarterback Sandy Schwab took the snap, handed off to halfback Ricky Edwards, then sneaks into the end zone where Edwards passes for the winning score. The Wildcat drive began when Tony Ellis fumbled on the MSU 39. The Spartans led 17-0 heading into the second quarter. Yarema completed 11 of 12 passes for a Big Ten single game pass completion record. Ellis rushed for a career-high 124 yards. Jones became the Spartan all-time receiver with 115 catches. Jones caught five passes for 92 yards for the afternoon.

MSU 26, Minnesota 7: MSU won the Brown Jug for the sixth straight year. Mojsiejenko converted field goals of 27, 44, 29 and 52 yards, the fourth Spartan ever to kick four field goals in one game. Yarema completed 11 of 18 passes, with TD strikes of 40 and 25 yards going to Daryl Turner, his only touchdowns of the year.

Iowa 24, MSU 18: Bobby Stoops intercepts a Yarema pass in Hawkeye territory with 30 seconds showing on the clock. Unable to muster any offense in the first half, MSU scored 15 points in the second half.

That was the Spartans of '82. Waters said matters could have, should have been different.

"We were a good football team," Waters said. "We were a very good football team. We were better than anyone we played. If we could have turned the breaks around, we would have had a great winning season. I felt we were good enough to go 9-2, 10-1. We were that good."

But the breaks never came. The '82 Spartans won't be remembered as a "good football team." They will, however, be remembered. Gosh, will they be remembered.

Denied Again

Ron Scott. Two-time All-American goalie.

Mark Hamway. High-scoring forward.

Ken Leiter. Hard-hitting defenseman.

Three reasons why Michigan State University should have bagged the NCAA hockey championship in 1983. "At least made it to the Final Four," quipped one Spartan patron. MSU has made five appearances to the NCAA tournament and last captured the title in 1966.

Talk was, if the Spartans were going to duplicate the feat, the 1982–83 team was the best bet. All the elements—goaltending, defense and offense—were present.

Or were they?

MSU, 30-11-1 (school record for wins) and 23-9 in the Central Collegiate Hockey Association, bowed to Harvard 9-8 at Bright Hockey Arena in the NCAA quarter-finals. The Crimson nipped MSU 6-5 in the first game. The two teams tied 3-3 in the second game, giving Harvard a goal edge in the total goals series.

"We were fortunate to get there (NCAA quarter-finals) in the first place," said MSU Coach Ron Mason, matter-of-factly.

Mason is referring to MSU's hubbub with Ferris State in the opening round of the CCHA play-offs.

The Bulldogs upended MSU 4-2 in the first of two games before 6,514 disgruntled rooters at Munn Ice Arena. The following night, MSU dumped Ferris State 5-1, winning the series by a 7-5 count.

"Our fans really did the number on them (Ferris State)," recalled Mason. MSU drew 128,876 fans for 20 home contests, an average of 6,444 for a school record.

MSU clobbered Ohio State 8-3 in the CCHA semi-finals at Joe Louis Arena. That pitted the Spartans and Bowling Green in the finals which Mason would later say "was the most dramatic hockey game I've ever been involved in."

Knotted at 3-all, MSU and Bowling Green went into over-time. Midway through the extra session Bowling Green was awarded a penalty shot when a Spartan tripped a Falcon on a "clean" breakaway.

With most of the 15,192 people on their feet, Brian Hills zoomed in on Ron Scott . . . slid left . . . fired . . . no good! Scott blocked the shot and smothered it for a face-off.

Before the crowd could catch its breath, Mark Hamway took a pass from Kelly Miller . . . cut up ice . . . unloaded a violent wristshot . . . and scored! The Spartans win 4-3, marking their second straight CCHA crown.

"It was just a heck of a hockey game," Mason said. "It could have gone either way. They (Bowling Green) had their chances and we had ours. Fortunately we scored when we had to to win the game."

Mason, 82-71 since he arrived in East Lansing in 1979, is not one to second guess.

However . . .

"We should have won (the first game with Harvard)," said Mason. "But we didn't play as well defensively as we would have liked. We blew a couple easy goals and they had some puck-luck around the net that we didn't."

And . . .

"Anytime you get into a play-off situation you have to have a lot of things fall into place," Mason continued. "If you don't, you're going to get knocked out."

The puzzle appears incomplete for the 1983–84 campaign.

Scott will bypass his senior year to play professionally. The native of Guelph, Ontario, maintained a 3.13 goals-against-average and amassed 2,884 saves during his three-year stint at MSU.

Hamway, the team's leading scorer in '82–83 with 30 goals and 29 assists, graduates. He ranks third on the MSU all-time scoring list with 98 goals.

Leiter, named to the CCHA All-Star team along with Scott, graduates. Leiter ended the '82–83 season with 28 points.

Also gone are Robert Martin (right wing), Todd Gardiner (center) and Nigel Thomas (center). Top recruits Warren Harper and Bob Lowes returned to Saskatchewan early during the '82–83 year.

Mason is happy with his new recruits for the '83–84 season. "These are all highly-talented players who will fit immediately into our program," he said.

It's unlikely, however, the new troops will measure up to the team of '82–83. A team that should have "at least made it to the Final Four."

DELTA GAMMA

ΔΓ

"Stroke, stroke, stroke! —No it's not the chorus from the ever popular song by Billy Squire. It's the coaches from Delta Gamma putting their swim team through their paces and trying to get them ready for this year's Anchor Splash. The event is put on every year by Delta Gamma to raise money for the Michigan School for the Blind. A swim team from every fraternity, coached by women from Delta Gamma and other sororities, met in the pool in February and competed in a number of events.

"It's a lot of fun,"said Janelle Hanlon of Delta Gamma. "The fraternities enjoy it and the gallery is usually pretty full."

To top off this splashy affair, the sorority sponsors a bar night at Dooley's to search out and crown a Mr. Anchor Splash.

The girls in the house seem to have no progblem balancing time for activities and homework. There are a lot of activities outside the house, and two of the women are active in ASMSU.

"I feel the more you have to do, the better you do everything," said Hanlon. "Also there is no real stereotype for our house. That's what makes us unique."

STUDENT COUNCIL

"Any issue having to do with academics comes through us first," says Jim Grant, chairman of the Student Council. "The Council is the student division of academic governance."

The thirty members of the Student Council put in three to four hours a week working on academic issues brought to them by standing committees of ASMSU.

This year the Council has been busy changing the by-laws for academic process. According to Grant, they have recently passed an amendment stating that the Council will no longer be overseen by President Mackey. Instead, the Council will oversee itself, a goal they have been working towards for several years. They have also recently approved the Academic Freedom Report.

Members of the Student Council represent each college within the university, having been elected through their individual colleges. Six members are voted for by the university at large, further assuring us that the entire university is fully represented in the decisions that the Council decides.

OFFICE OF BLACK AFFAIRS

Dream—an aspiration, goal; aim. Something of unreal beauty and charm.

King—a person or thing preeminent in its class.

Martin Luther King had a dream. This year, the Office of Black Affairs, along with other groups on campus and in the Lansing area, sought to revitalize King's vision with a production entitled, "Reviving the Dream and Keeping it Alive: A Metamorphosis." Work on the project began in the summer, with everyone involved working long hours. Stephen Clifford, director of the OBA, and also budget chairperson of the show, said he was very proud of the event.

"It ran a little longer than we expected," he said "But everyone worked really hard and I think it came off rather well."

Clifford said the OBA's goals change depending on the campus situation. Throughout the year, they work on increasing cultural awareness with general information programs and a cultural film festival.

KAPPA ALPHA THETA

KAΘ

Like their national symbol of a high flying kite, the women of Kappa Alpha Theta pride themselves on being individuals striving for the highest goals and believing that only the sky is the limit. According to Theta member Cathy Kretzschmer, the sorority has followed that tradition since their beginning, when the founders established Kappa Alpha Theta as the first greek-letter fraternity for women in the nation.

"We pride ourselves on being individualistic," Kretzchmer says. "But we really emphasize friendship and supporting one another."

It's that unity that has helped lead the Thetas to success with their annual "Lovely Legs" contest at Dooley's each winter term. The money raised in the contest is given to the local Hospice organization, which works with the terminally ill and their families.

Another major fund raiser for the Thetas is the "Theta Tuck-In" that takes place each fall. According to Kretzchmer, for a small fee a Theta will go to a local residence and tuck someone into bed and read a bedtime story. Proceeds are given to the local Council Against Domestic Assault.

Regardless of all the community services the greek system provides, Cathy says a lot of people have a bad image of the greeks. She adds that the Thetas are working with other members of the greek system to help people realize that greeks provide good services to the community.

"We want to change the image of the greeks."

ALPHA DELTA PHI

ΑΔΦ

"We're a house with a wide perspective," says Chris Fisher, philantrophy chairperson for Alpha Delta Phi. "You can be who you are. We don't make people conform to our ideas."

Alpha Delta Phi is the latest addition to the greek system at MSU and members are looking forward to receiving both their national and international charters in the Spring Rush.

"We've really focused on accomplishing that goal this year," Fisher says.

The house was also active in raising funds for WKAR, Michigan State's public television station, as well as developing an on-going project with the American Cancer Society.

And according to Fisher, this is the first year they have ever made it to the basketball playoffs within the Greek system and he warns, "We're looking forward to Greek Week so that we can regain our titles."

ALPHA PHI

ΑΦ

Mortgage burning festivities and kidnappings made life at the Alpha Phi sorority house even more spirited and active this year. This kidnappings occurred compliments of a new fund raiser called "Cardiac Arrest," through which money was raised in the form in "ransoms" paid by friends and colleagues of local figures who were "kidnapped" by the sorority. The women of Alpha Phi donated the ransom money — along with money they raised through their annual "Run for Fun" — to Michigan's Heart Fund.

The house's mortgage burning was celebrated by Alpha Phi members and alumnae in an in-house ceremoney fall term.

Away from the sorority, the women of Alpha Phi proved to be a diverse and scholarly group of students involved in many different campus activities. As President, Katie Maentz, noted, while there is a place for every type of girl in Alpha Phi, "academic excellence is something we strive for."

PI BETA PHI
ΠΒΦ

Cans, cans and more cans; that's what the women of Pi Beta Phi got—and wanted—when they hit the streets of East Lansing with the men of Phi Delta Theta in an effort to raise money for their new philanthropy. During the early hours on Saturday, May 7, the members of the two houses collected pop and beer cans and bottles for the Mid-Michigan Easter Seals.

Just a few weeks later, the members of Pi Beta Phi joined with another fraternity—Psi Upsilon—to do their part in the annual celebration of Greek Week at MSU. Displaying their musical talents during the Greek Sing, the students made a "Salute to Vaudeville."

Adding further to the Pi Beta Phi's already busy Spring Term, was the annual celebration of their Founder's Day. As is custom, the current members invited the alumnae to the house for dessert and, believe it or not, a little history lesson. Both the alumnae and the current members were expected to do their homework before the festivities and prepare a skit on the sorority's history.

PSYCHOLOGY CLUB

Yes, there is a psychology club.

According to Chairperson Rita Simmons, the club was reestablished and officially became registered as a student organization during Fall term of 1982.

Within that first term, 60 people joined the club to discover more about the field of psychology through special speakers and field trips. And according to Simmons, that's exactly what the club wanted to achieve.

"What we really want to accomplish is to educate students on any area of psychology," she said. "We want to leave members with more of a view of the vocational aspects."

Simmons stressed that the club is not just people with a common interest of getting together every other week. The members want to do more than explore the different aspects of psychology, she said. Therefore, the club is presently involved with exploring the different avenues in which they can help the community.

She adds, "We want to put something out, too."

M.S.U. STUDENT NURSES ASSOCIATION

Perhaps it was something to do with her name. Susan First, the woman heading the MSU Student Nurse Blood Drive, was very nervous about the whole situation. She was in charge and it was her first time giving blood. Nurses are supposed to be used to the sight of blood, but the combination of nerves and initiation into blood giving must have been too much for First because she hyperventilated.

"I think it was just because she was really nervous," said spokesperson Jennifer Wing.

In addition to this blood drive which is co-sponsored by the Red Cross, the nurses also sponsor a job fair, health fairs and a hospital visit at Halloween.

MSU Student Nurses have legislative powers and are active in lobbying for health related issues. In addition to this, they also have a sibling program, similar to the one medical students have. An upper division student is paired with a lower division student in this program. The older students help out the younger ones and show them the ropes.

KAPPA ALPHA PSI

KAΨ

Chances are, you've seen them on campus, doning white tuxedos and white canes and "stepping" to a rhythmic beat. You may have seen them sponsoring a book drive for the University of Africa or conducting seminars on CPR, rape prevention or cultural awareness. Perhaps you visited their spook house on Halloween or know someone who took part in their tutoring service. Chances are, if you haven't seen them yet, you will.

Kappa Alpha Psi was established as a fraternity in 1911. It wasn't until 1956 that the Delta Pi chapter was created here at MSU. This year alone, nine new members joined the fraternity for a grand total of 25 borthers.

Craig Shelton, secretary of Delta Pi, says the fraternity looks for high personal values in their members although they try not to discriminate against others.

"To unite black men is a key ingredient in our chapter," says Shelton. "We would like to help unite the blacks at MSU and provide a better understanding of one another."

Presently, the Kappas are involved in Kappa alumnus-Congressman John Conyer's Committee for the Commemoration of Martin Luther King, Jr. The committee is actively trying to establish King's birthday as a national holiday. If the committee is successful, members of the Delta Pi Chapter will feel they helped to make the project a success. Achievement, after all, is what the Kappas stand for, "achievement in every area of human endeavor," Shelton says.

Among the alumni who have achieved successful careers are basketball player Wilt Chamberlain, tennis star Arthur Ashe and Mayor of Detroit Richard Austin. Present members here at MSU also show promising signs of success with several Kappas majoring in fields of pre-law and pre-med. All members must have a 2.5 grade-point average in order to pledge the fraternity.

"We strive for achievement,"Craig Shelton says, "and we're sincere in what we do."

GAMMA PHI BETA

ΓΦΒ

Despite its relatively small size, Gamma Phi accomplished big things in MSU's Greek System in 1982/83. Efforts towards improving their scholorship certainly seem to have paid off, as the sorority's new fall actives sported the highest G.P.A. of all the houses on campus.

The Gamma Phis also started a new program within the house called Alumni-Ami, which is a pen-pal network between current members and alumnae of the sorority. According to Karen Hahn, the new program has been very successful so far.

Important to the women of Gamma Phi is their dedication to the sorority's national philanthropy — Camp Sechelt, a summer camp for underprivileged girls, located in Vancouver, Canada.

Come springtime, the diverse Gamma Phis sponsor their own game during Greek Week, as well as actively participating in other house's games.

STUDENT ALUMNI ASSOCIATION

As prospective students, we all came in contact with the Student Alumni Association. They're the ones who lead the twice daily tours of campus and tell about future life at MSU. "... and living over here in West Circle is really nice because you get to hear the band practice in the evenings in the fall."

The Association also hosts Career Awareness Week and works with the alumni on all special days, such as Homecoming.

They also sponsor a program called Spartan Hosts. In this program, a student lives with an alumnus for a week and goes to work with him. This gives the student invaluable help with career planning. "We are the liaison between the past, present, and future students at MSU," said Michele Miller, president.

HOTEL SALES MANAGEMENT ASSOCIATION

Imagine New York City at dusk — the city is just coming alive. The lights begin to come on and flash, and slowly the people begin to come out and enjoy the nightlife. Men and women come out and stroll past the tall buildings and noisy taxis. This could have been you over Christmas break, if you were a member of the Hotel Sales Management Association. They were there on business, of course, but that didn't stop them from enjoying the city in their free time.

The HSMA members swoop in on a city, sometimes by invitation, sometimes by their own initiative, and conduct a sales blitz. These blitzes have nothing to do with football. The members go to a hotel or restaurant, meet with the manager, tour the facility and are wined and dined for an overnight stay. The next day the members go to area businesses and try to convince them to have their meetings and conventions at the hotel or restaurant.

HSMA allows students to get a feel for the business, as this is what many of them will probably be doing for the rest of their lives, and make some employment contacts.

Many hotels like the idea of HSMA blitzes and have asked the Association to come and stay at their establishments.

"After all, it's basically free advertising for the hotel, although they do pay for our food and lodging," said Julie Halstead of HSMA.

FARMHOUSE FRATERNITY

"We emphasize three things," says Mike Gill, vice-president of the Farm House Fraternity, "Leadership, scholarship and fellowship."

According to Gill, several of the Farm House men are officers in the agriculture clubs around campus, including the Rodeo Club and the Block and Bridle Club.

The fraternity has also become more active within the Greek system and the community as a whole, Gill says. This year the men spent a weekend gleaning potato fields for the Ingham County Food Bank. At Thanksgiving, the potatoes were given to unemployed auto workers in Michigan. Gill adds that they are looking forward to gleaning again next year.

During the Fall, the fraternity worked for the university as security men for the Alumni Autumn Fest. They also participated in the annual Crop Walk and volunteered for workers for Small Animals Day.

MARANATHA CHRISTIAN FELLOWSHIP

"We believe that the church affects all areas of life," says Daniel Crawford, pastor of Marantha Christian Fellowship, "and the basic way to change things is for man to be born again."

Maranatha is a church dedicated to the radical teachings that Jesus Christ is Lord of people's lives, Crawford says. Their major message is the Lordship of Christ and the 100% percent commitment to Him.

The church, which began in the fall of 1981, is one of 60 New Testament churches in the country. According to Crawford, each of the churches believes that the bible speaks clearly about the popular issues of today.

Marantha is one of the many campus fellowships that are joining together in a spirit of unity, Crawford says. That unity, which is not limited to MSU's campus, is according to Crawford, God's preparation for a world revival.

"God is doing good things all across the nation," he added.

KAPPA KAPPA GAMMA

ΚΚΓ

"We really stress unification," says Ann Mayhew, president of Kappa Kappa Gamma. "Although diverse, we act as a team."

Mayhew says that the Kappas participate in community activities because it's important to keep in touch with the community. And they accomplish this goal be participating in several activities throughout the year.

During Fall term, the Kappas particpated in the annual CROP-Walk. In the Winter, the house helped the Arthritis Foundation by helping to sponsor Bar Night at Olga's. And in the Spring, the Kappas could be found collecting donations with the Lansing Lion's Club, for the eye bank. "We think that it is important to do something each term," Mayhew says.

Many members are also active in several councils and clubs on campus. "It not only broadens their view, but a they come back and share their experiences with the girls in the house, it also broadens our view as a whole," says Ann Mayhew. It is because of their teamwork and interaction with others the house is stronger.

KAPPA DELTA PI
KΔΠ

Kappa Delta Pi, the honor society in education, has some pretty stringent requirements for entry.

"We are looking for excellence in education," said Dr. Bill Walsh, counselor for the group. "We want excellent scholarship, high personal standards, and distinguished achievement."

A rather formidable set of standards, but the society seems not to have any problem filling its quota as indicated by its 300 plus members.

Here at MSU, the society emphasizes undergraduate participation, but will take some graduate students as members. Candidates must be nominated by faculty or another member.

Kappa Delta Pi has representatives in many student groups and co-sponsors educational groups that come to speak on campus. They are presently offering two scholarships and next year may possibly be offering a third.

Dr. Walsh emphasized that the organization is student run and operated.

Faculty counselor Dr. William Walsh offers congratulations to a new initiate at Kappa Delta Pi.

COLLEGE OF SOCIAL SCIENCE STUDENT ADVISORY COUNCIL

The Student Advisory Council of MSU's College of Social Science expanded considerably this year, participating in two new projects within the College as well as establishing a College-wide newsletter.

The SAC's special projects included a fall term Careers Conference—co-sponsored by the College's Career Programs Office, and programming for the College's new Residence Program.

The undergraduate student members who make up the SAC also function as liaisons between the students and administration. The SAC representatives, who are drawn from each department in the College, serve both their fellow students and the College's administration and faculty by appointing student representatives to College and University policy-making committees and by undertaking special projects—such as the Careers Conference—that are designed to further the interests of the students in the College.

OMEGA PSI PHI

ΩΨΦ

When Omega Psi Phi was established nationally in 1917, four principles guided them: manhood, scholarship, perseverance and uplift. The chapter at MSU carries on these founding tenets proudly and also does a good deal of community service.

"We always donate money to the NAACP and the United Negro College Fund," said Charles Dulin, president.

Several Omega Psi Phi men, or Ques as they are nicknamed, have been president of the NAACP branch in Lansing.

In February the Ques hosted a Black Awareness Week. As part of this they took a group from the Lansing area Boys' Club to a basketball game.

"We really had a lot of fun with that one," said Kendall Sherman, an Omega Psi Phi Brother.

The Omega Psi Phis also have a Black History Program. This consists of bringing speakers to campus to give lectures on important topics. This program runs for the entire year.

"This fraternity is based on brotherhood and leadership," said Sherman, "but above all you have to be willing to participate in community affairs."

ALPHA TAU OMEGA

ATΩ

What do Art Linkletter, Tennessee Williams and James Watt all have in common? All of them are past members of Alpha Tau Omega.

A more recent member, John Baxter, says joining Alpha Tau Omega has provided a good supplement to his education. Not only has it provided good friends within the Greek system, but it has also given him a wider perspective of community needs.

This year, the Alphas sponsored a raffle for the Michigan School for the Blind as well as a three-on-three basketball tournament, with the proceeds going to the American Cancer Society.

According to Baxter, the fraternity also concentrated on developing stability in their membership and succeeded as the number of pledges continue to grow. They also emphasized becoming more involved within the Greek system than in the past by participating in more Greek activities and becoming more dedicated to their little sisters.

Baxter says that members of the fraternity aren't only interested in the social aspects of living in a fraternity, but are also interested in university life as a whole.

"We're students who care for the university," he says. "That's what we are here for. We're students first."

ZETA TAU ALPHA

ZTA

When it comes to MSU's Greek Week games, Zeta Tau Alpha is tough to beat. The Zetas walked away from 1982's spring Greek Week festivities with more trophies than any other house, including the "Spirit Award" which goes to the house that participates the most enthusiastically and zealously. They also placed first in the Greek games, and ranked third overall. . .Let it be known, too, that the ladies of Zeta Tau Alpha intend to retain their commendable position against all challengers, come 1983's Greek Week games!

Athletics isn't the only area in which the Zetas excel though; scholastically, they've achieved much as well. This year, they ranked consistently high in the Green System's scholarship rating system.

The ladies of Zeta Tau Alpha were also champs when it came to carrying on Zeta traditions, such as the annual Dad's Day and Founder's Day festivities. Early in the fall, the dads of the Zeta members were treated to a tailgate party and a MSU football game; while Zeta alumnae helped celebrate Founder's Day, the commemoration of the sorority's founding in 1898, on October 15.

DELTA SIGMA THETA, INC. A PUBLIC SERVICE SORORITY

ΔΣΘ

When sororities were formed, they were mainly service groups and had a small social role. Today, however, it seems as if social priorities have taken over and service sometimes takes a back seat.

At Delta Sigma Theta, Inc., service always has and always will come first.

"We are a non-social sorority," said Tyra Wright, a soror. "We are public service oriented."

In the fall of every year they hold an ice breaker in the I.M. It was originally designed to allow students from Africa to meet other black students. Now it is mainly a big party that gives the community a chance to get to know each other a little better.

At Thanksgiving they held a "Can Jam," where people donated canned goods instead of money. The women also made up food baskets for several families in the Lansing area.

In the spring they hold their Annual Sickle Cell Anemia Walk-a-Thon. The route is 10 miles long, starts on campus, and continues out to the Capitol. All the proceeds go to the fund for fighting sickle cell anemia.

In the winter the sorority sponsored a study-a-thon in Wonders Kiva. The Deltas, as they are called, convinced 75 people to study all day to raise money for the United Negro College Fund.

The women of Delta Sigma Theta also participate in other national projects which are set up by their national committee.

BETA THETA PI

ΒΘΠ

Boasting its largest pledge class ever, Beta Theta Pi continued to grow and diversify in this, its 33rd year in MSU's Greek System.

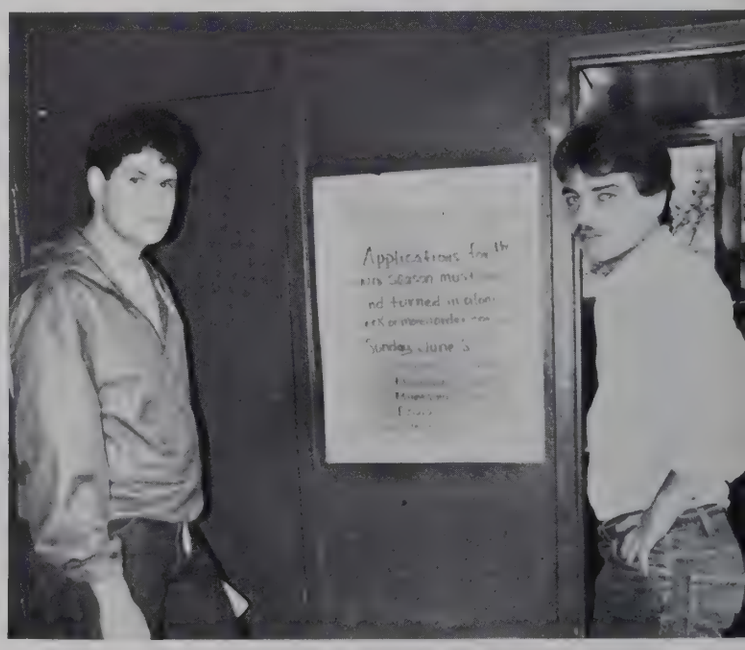
The fraternity's philanthropy—Easter Seals—received a great deal of support from the members of Beta Theta Pi, who worked hard to put together several fund raising functions, including a cheerleading contest and basketball tournament held at East Lansing High School for fraternity and dormitory teams. The Betas also raised money for Easter Seals during their Bar Night festivities at Dooley's.

Alumni involvement is something that has always been an important part of the Beta House. This year, well over 100 alumni returned to MSU to attend the fraternity's Homecoming Dance.

The men of Beta Theta Pi also displayed their diverse athletic talents this year, when they emerged the victors of the fraternity badminton and Ping-Pong league.

The tradition of the Beta Canoe Race, held during Greek Week was carried on by house members who, together with the ladies of Delta Gamma Sorority, also participated in the Greek Week songfest.

The parents of Beta Theta Pi's 75 members were also treated to a special weekend at MSU during the fraternity's annual Parents Weekend.



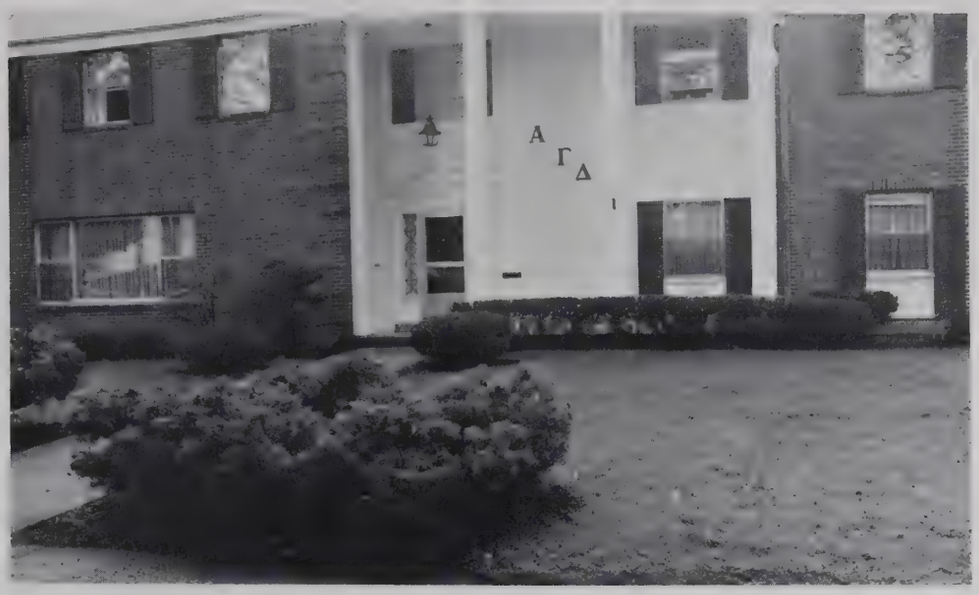
ALPHA GAMMA DELTA
ΑΓΔ

The women of Alpha Gamma Delta must be doing something right if Mom Rogers has hung in there for 11 years — the longest period of time any housemother has been with an MSU sorority. And indeed, in this, Mom Roger's 12th year with Alpha Gamma Delta, the members of MSU's first women's sorority did prove that they are extraordinary.

Together with the Delta Sigma Phi fraternity, the "AGD" constructed the "Jolly Green Spartan" float that won the MSU Homecoming Float contest of 1982. AGD Denise Dorigo brought further distinction to the house, as she was elected to the Homecoming Court.

Away from campus life, the women of Alpha Gamma Delta managed to accomplish just as much. They sold balloons and trick-or treated long and hard enough to raise over $1,900 for the Juvenile Diabetes Foundation. In addition, many of the members were active in various community programs such as special education, Angel Flight, and reading for the blind.

Alpha Gamma Delta's annual Greek Week activity is one that Mom Rogers should get extra credit for enduring. After all, what mother would tolerate a "Slime-In" where a multitude of college students ravage frantically through a mud pit, searching for golf balls?



THETA CHI

ΘX

"We're a social fraternity," says Mark Doyal, secretary of Theta Chi, "And we emphasize the symbol of the helping hand."

This year Theta Chi helped the St. Thomas of Aquinas Orphanage by selling cups that entitled buyers to a week-long rebate at several area bars—beer refills for only fifty cents. During Spring term, they also directed their time and energy to the Special Olympics.

According to Doyal, Theta Chi is a fraternity that does its best to support their long standing traditions. Anchoring and serenading are among those traditions, Doyal says, as well as scholastic and outstanding athletic achievement.

"We're currently in the lead for All Sports in the Greek system," he says. "We've won the title six out of eight years now. This year we're trying for seven out of nine."

ALPHA GAMMA RHO

ΑΓΡ

"We're different from other fraternities in that we're a social/professional fraternity; we stress the professional side of education as much as the social," says Tim Bailey, president of Alpha Gamma Rho. "We're building leaders and preparing for our future."

According to Bailey, all of the members within the fraternity are majoring in the field of agriculture or a field relating to it. He adds, "That does not mean that all of the members are farmers. We've been stereotyped that way. A lot of our members aren't going into farming at all."

"Stars" might be a better way of classifying the AGRs. During Fall term, the fraternity took part in a filming of "P.M. Magazine." A segment of the show reviewing study habits at Michigan universities, showed the AGRs throwing a member into the Red Cedar, a tradition long held for when a member gives his fraternity pin to his girlfriend.

ASHER HOUSE

"We tend to think of ourselves as a family," says Karen Haak, a freshman resident at the Asher House.

Haak shares the house with other men and women involved with the Christian Science faith and who attend MSU and the surrounding colleges. She says the house provides a good study environment and is conducive to growth both academically and spiritually.

According to Haak, members of the house are also proud of their achievements outside of the house. For the past seven years, members have won the Junior 500 push-cart race during Greek Week.

Haak also says that the house maintains high academic standards with an average grade point of 3.1 to 3.3 among the residents. All of the residents must apply first in order to be considered for housing. Students are accepted only after extensive interviews.

MSU DAIRY CLUB

MSU's 1982/83 Dairy Club certainly was well-traveled this year, as students of the 60-member group had the opportunity to visit three states during the academic year. Because students of the Dairy Club are also members of the American Dairy Science Association, they were invited to attend the Association's regional and national conventions in Iowa and Pennsylvania. In addition, the MSU Dairy Club sponsored a trip over Spring Break to Tennessee, where they attended The Grand Ole Opry.

According to Secretary, Lynn Wilcox, the Club's central focus is the promotion of the dairy industry. In keeping with this direction, the Dairy Club sponsors a Christmas cheese sale on the MSU campus every fall term.

M.S.U. MARKETING ASSOCIATION

Through the formation and coordination of various committees, the students of MSU's Marketing Association receive functional and professional experience relating to their field of study.

The Association, made up of over 300 undergraduate students representing numerous of the University's major fields of study, seeks to give its members real-world experience while they are still attending the University.

For instance, the Association's Professional Programs Committee invites representatives from corporations such as Proctor & Gamble and IBM to speak to the members of the group.

Another of the Association's Committees publishes and distributes Marketline Magazine; the Programs Committee gives future market researchers experience in conducting research surveys for national and area companies.

Two committees—the Publicity Committee and the Student Advertising Agency—provide a base of experience for MSU advertising students.

This year, the Association's Community Service Committee raised over $1,000 for the Michigan Heart Association, while the Projects Committee members gained experience by working in conjunction with Squirt distributors.

MSU's Marketing Association is also a student chapter of the American Marketing Association which is an organization of professionals in the marketing field. As a chapter of that Association, the officers of the group had the opportunity to attend a leadership conference at the national convention in Chicago where MSU's Association won an award for Chapter Excellence.

STUDENT COALITION FOR THE EPISCOPAL MINISTRY

This coalition is an on-campus student organization which initiates, supports, and carries out the Episcopal Ministry at MSU. Despite the fact that it is a student organization, its members include MSU staff, faculty, their spouses, and families as well.

The group's foremost function is the celebration of the Eucharistic liturgy every Sunday and on all Holy Days in MSU's Alumni Chapel. Supper and a get-together—featuring either a guest speaker or a group discussion—are also held every Sunday after the Eucharistic service.

Each term, the coalition offers both on and off campus classes in Scripture or theology. Retreats are also planned each term and are open to any interested persons.

Finally, the group sets for itself special focuses for each term, during which time their efforts are concentrated on issues such as refugee sponsorship, peace and justice, or human relationships.

PHI KAPPA PSI
ΦΚΨ

"Nationally, the one word to describe us would be gentlemen," says Charlie Burnell, president of Phi Kappa Psi. "But here on campus, spirit and motivation within the brotherhood would be more accurate."

According to Burnell, the guys within the house are closer than they have ever been. It has been their goal to make a stronger interfraternity group, one that is more involved within the Greek system, as well as the community.

Spring term, the Phi Psi's sponsored a philanthropy for the American Cancer Society. For a fee, other Greek organizations could paint the rock that stands in front of the fraternity. All proceeds from the term-long event were given to the national charity.

Burnell adds that the Phi Psi's are a group of guys that are willing to go out of their way for others.... "We're people who would always be there if you needed someone to call on."

DELTA SIGMA PHI

beer—a malted and hopped somewhat bitter alcoholic beverage.

Nothing is mentioned about fraternities in the definition of beer, but beer and fraternities just seem to go together like . . . well, like malt and hops.

Delta Sigma Phi is just one example of the romance between fraternity men and beer. They sponsor the Greek Chug and the Chug for Charity at Dooley's. All the proceeds from this last event go to the Arthritis Foundation.

Delta Sigma Phi holds other fund raisers for the Arthritis Foundation, and these do not necessarily involve beer. One of these was a raffle for a trip to Las Vegas.

"We are a very diverse group," said Drew Ten Eyck, treasurer. "We have veterans in our fraternity. It's just a blend of people."

This blend seems to be working very well in the athletic department. The fraternity has teams in just about every sport and won the All Sports Trophy.

They also won the Homecoming float competition for the second year in a row with their "Can the Boilermakers" creation.

"We can't really be classified," said Ten Eyck. "We can do whatever we want."

DELTA CHI

ΔX

There's no doubt about it, Delta Chi was in the news this year. According to Paul Barger, president of the fraternity, one of the highlights of the year was hosting a Detroit Free Press reporter for a week and then reading the results in a page and a half spread in "The Way We Live" section of the Free Press.

But that wasn't all. During the Fall, Delta Chi was also among several fraternities chosen to take part in the filming of a segment of "P.M. Magazine."

Those weren't the only newsworthy events for Delta Chi, however. The fraternity was also proclaimed the champion of football, basketball, and tennis within the Greek system. Barger says that sports isn't their only strong point though. They are also very active within the community. At Halloween, members of Delta Chi sponsor a spook house for children, with proceeds going to area children's homes. They also participated in a charity wheelchair basketball game against the East Lansing Globerollers. He adds that Delta Chi is also trying to establish a national philanthropy.

Barger says that the major difference between Delta Chi and other fraternities at MSU, is the diversity among members. "There is no one certain group of people at Delta Chi."

THE STATE NEWS

The familiar clacking of typewriters and odor of glue pots became a thing of the past this year, as the State News updated its production system with 16 new video display terminals.

"It's made the editing of stories much easier," said Joe Mielke, editor-in-chief.

Instead of writing stories on paper, reporters write them on the terminals and file them in the computer. The story is then called up and edited on the screen, which eliminates the need for it to be typed a second time.

The State News received the terminals over winter break and began using them a few weeks into the term.

"It was quite an experience," said Mielke. "We went from typewriters to computers all in one day."

The paper has also added two new syndicated columns on the opinion page, George Will and Richard Cohen. According to Mielke, the columns were added to bring different viewpoints to the paper, especially the conservative side.

"It's been hard to find someone with a conservative outlook who can really write well," he said.

Feature and science pages have been added in order to provide more comprehensive coverage and the staff has tried to emphasize campus and local stories more than national events.

The paper has approximately 60 people working in the newsroom, including between six and eight interns and fourteen reporters. It has a circulation of 40,000, making it one of the largest college papers in the country.

PSI UPSILON

ΨΥ

Tradition is the root of all fraternities, but at Psi Upsilon, tradition is a big part of everyday life. Coats and ties are required for dinner and if a lady enters the house all men present on the first floor stand up.

"We pride ourselves on being gentlemen," said Glenn Stenson, president.

The men of Psi Upsilon may be gentlemen, but twice a year they prove they are just kids at heart.

At Christmas and again at Easter they sponsor parties for about 40–50 children from the Beekman Center. The children range in age from 6 to 13 and several have been to more than one party and recognize a few of the members.

"We all have a real fun time," said Stenson. "At Christmas we have Santa come in with toys for everyone and at Easter we hide eggs all over the house for the kids to find. Everything is donated by the brothers."

SIGMA ALPHA EPSILON

ΣΑΕ

Nearly 10 years ago, there were only seven members in the MSU chapter of the largest national fraternity. Last year, plagued with financial problems, the house was close to shutting down. But things have changed for the SAEs, who boasted the largest number of pledges on campus winter term.

"We're trying to get back on our feet," said President Dave Gorcyca. "I think we're headed in the right direction. Things are really looking up and we are really growing."

Now with 55 members, the fraternity is experiencing growing pains and is planning on buying a new house. "We're very stable now," said Gorcyca, "and we're ready to move into something bigger and better."

The SAE house is active in fundraisers and devotes a lot of time to Special Olympics and Boys' Club projects, Gorcyca said. "We're not just a social fraternity—we really enjoy helping out," he said.

DELTA DELTA DELTA

Need your airplane washed? Don't worry, your eyes aren't failing you—it does say airplane. If you do happen to have a dirty airplane lying around though, you may be out of luck this year. But don't despair, plans are in the works for the Tri Deltas to sponsor their innovative Fall Plane Wash again next year.

The ladies of Tri Delta haven't gone completely off-the-wall though—they do sponsor a more conventional annual 10-Kilometer Run which, together with the Plane Wash, raised money for their philanthropy, Children's Blood Diseases.

In its 34th year at MSU, the Tri Deltas also carried on the tradition of the Spring Pansy Breakfast. This annual event draws alumnae and current members together for a farewell to graduating seniors.

ALPHA XI DELTA

ΑΞΔ

Raising money for their philanthropy is one thing Alpha Xi Delta sure knows how to do right! After all, what better way to raise money than by spending a winter weekend on the ski slopes? On February 25, 26, and 27, the members of Alpha Xi Delta were busy taking as many runs as their tired legs would allow down the slopes of northwest Michigan's Crystal Mountain. But before their Ski-a-Thon was over, the women of Alpha Xi Delta had succeeded in raising over $500 in pledges and donations for the American Lung Association.

Participation in MSU's Greek System is also an important part of life at Alpha Xi Delta. This year, their activities included Christmas caroling with Alpha Kappa Alpha and sponsoring an event during Greek Week.

Several of the sorority's members were also involved in university events and programs.

DELTA TAU DELTA

ΔΤΔ

"Greek life can be something more than a party," says Jeff Dick, president of Delta Tau Delta. "We're striving to achieve improvement on academics and community activities."

It can also include becoming a major contributor to a national charity. This year, Delta Tau Delta sponsored the 10th annual "MS Dance-for-Strength" dance marathon and raised $34,000 for Multiple Sclerosis research.

The Delts, attempting to become more involved in community activities, also participated in a fund-raising bike-a-thon and sponsored an event with proceeds going to the Hospice of Lansing.

Delta Tau Delta was also the scene of a regional conference of other chapters in eight states. According to Dick, the conference is held each year at a chosen fraternity. He adds that the conference was a major highlight for the fraternity.

Dick says that the thing he finds most striking about the members of Delta Tau Delta is their brotherhood. He adds that a person can feel totally comfortable with his fraternity brothers, the moment they walk in the door. According to Dick, that is due to the internal cooperation of the guys within the house, despite their diversity of interests.

PANHELLENIC COUNCIL

"Our purpose is to promote inner-sorority spirit," says Terri Holloway, president of the Panhellenic Council. "There is more to the Greek system than separate chapters working individually. Our job is to get the whole Greek system working together."

According to Holloway, this year the Council has been recognized as the second strongest Panhellenic Council in the nation. She says that wouldn't be possible without the tremendous amount of cooperation that has existed within the Greek system.

"We've all been working together this year, not just the Council, but the entire Greek system." She adds, "It's been a growing year."

The Council itself is made up of a minimum of one elected representative from every sorority on campus. The representatives act as the voting member for their sorority and hold that position for the entire school year. Presently, there are a total of 15 representatives and eight officers on the council, all working together to improve sorority rush week and other Greek activities.

"We actually hold a governing position," Holloway says.

The Panhellenic Council was created in 1922, a time when the first sorority at MSU was also established. Since that time, the Council has grown in both size and reputation, and is certain to continue growing in years to come.

POP ENTERTAINMENT

Adam Ant . . . REO . . . Devo . . . All were among the entertainment provided for the nearly 40,000 students of MSU during the 1982–83 school year. And all were only part of Pop Entertainment's effort to provide quality entertainment to a wide variety of students.

"We're always trying to please as many students as possible," says Sue Baskin, director of Pop Entertainment. "We strive to get a variety."

Nearly 200 students volunteer their time to promote contemporary entertainment on campus, be it through security, working as ushers, or as secretaries taking care of the fine details of the complex organization.

According to Baskin, anyone interested in the music industry, production, promotion or anything related to entertainment, can volunteer their time to the association.

"It's an excellent opportunity to gain professional experience while getting an education," she adds.

The organization as a whole is continually striving to become more and more professional. Sue says the organization has a good reputation in the music industry and is aiming to maintain that reputation. "And of course, we want to continue providing quality entertainment to the students of MSU."

MSU STUDENT FOUNDATION

"What we really want to do is show MSU's best advantages," says Jane Perry, president of the MSU Student Foundation. "We promote MSU and show our Spartan spirit."

And spirit they have. MSU Student Foundation are the sponsors, participators and lucky card holders of the Card Block, seen by thousands during the home football games in the Fall. Nearly 150 members also participate in the spirit section at the hockey games, commonly known as the Slap Shots. The Spartan Spirits, numbering nearly 300 at basketball games, are also part of the Foundation.

All together, the general membership of the group is well over 1,000 people. According to Perry, that number increases nearly daily, almost doubling during Spring term. She adds that the only requirement for becoming a member of the Foundation, is attendance at meetings. In other words, Perry says, "If you want to become a member, you can. There are no limitations."

The Student Foundation is also making plans for expansion in ways other than membership. Perry explains that due to the success of Tel-an-Alum, which raised money for student scholarships and grants, the group plans to extend their fund raising services in the upcoming years.

In addition, the Foundation is also responsible for the Ambassadors program at MSU, Little Siblings weekend, Parent's Day and the 10,000 meter run.

PHI DELTA THETA

ΦΔΘ

Ask a Phi Delt what he likes most about being a Phi Delt and he'll answer a "strong brotherhood." House members agree that theirs is a small, closely-knit group and unusually supportive of one another.

"Unlike some houses, we really make it an effort to get to know each other well," said President Mike Popelic. "Right now we have 67 members including pledges, which is the ideal size for us."

The support they talk about does run strong and can be seen at lacrosse games, tennis tournaments, and other sporting events. Phi Delts show up regularly to cheer on their brothers who participate on MSU teams.

"We are a very active group of guys," Popelic said, "not only in sports, but in community services and in campus organizations. And we have strong representation on the Senior Class Council."

The Phi Delts leave their mark on social events, too. They hold an Oktoberfest every fall, drawing one of the largest crowds all year, and sponsor the ever-popular Greek Week Frisbee Tournament.

SENIOR CLASS COUNCIL

For the Class of '83, facing a tight job market was still not enough of a challenge. Led by the Senior Class Council, graduates faced a final challenge—an innovative campaign to leave their mark on campus with a $75,000 class gift—a decorative fountain at the Wharton Center.

Co-chairman of the Council, Annie House, said the challenge has nearly been met with pledges totaling over $70,000. "We set a very realistic goal and are proud we will be able to reach it," she said. "We think a contribution to the Wharton Center is very special and will add a lot to the beauty of our campus."

While the biggest annual project for the Council is the class gift, the 25-member organization is active in planning Homecoming activities for alumni and is involved with organizing commencement. It is also responsible for selecting and honoring the 25 Outstanding Seniors in the graduating class and the Outstanding Faculty Member.

"We are a very dedicated group that maintains professionalism and credibility," House said. "We give advice to the administration, and they see us as a professional group representing seniors rather than as just a service organization."

LAMBDA CHI ALPHA

ΛΧΑ

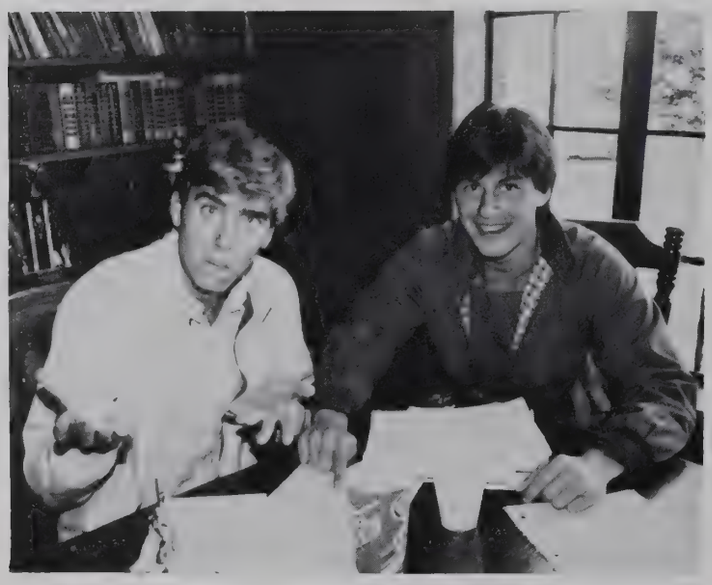
Lambda Chi Alpha, located at 128 Collingwood Ave., is the second largest fraternity—98 members—in the Greek System. Though more than half of Lambda Chi Alpha is comprised of Business and Communications majors, the house embodies a spirit of diversity and individuality, according to vice-president Paul Corona. "We are good people," said Corona, "as open and honest as the day is long."

Rounding out the remainder of Lambda Chi's hierarchy are president Tom Cote, treasurer Greg Kennedy, and chapter advisor Bill McIntyre.

The Lambdas think of themselves as unique among Greeks. They like to socialize with a variety of people on a variety of levels. They don't rely on the house for providing a sheltered existence, unless, of course, it is raining.

Among the fraternity's sponsored activities, tops on the list is the Junior 500 Push-Cart Race open to all MSU students. 1983 was the 35th annual running, and the Lambdas hope to revive enthusiasm for the event to levels reminiscent of the 1950s. Other Lambda philanthropic activities include the yearly Chant for those Who Can't Chant-a-thon and the annual combined Lambda/Rotary spaghetti and meatball dinner.

The Lambdas hope to maintain their distinct image throughout the upcoming years, and any prospective members are urged to drop by during Rush.



PHI MU

ΦM

Seeing white spots is something usually associated with looking at flash bulbs and ingesting hallucinogenic substances. For the women of Phi Mu however, the white spots were closer to white spheres and came from playing Ping-Pong all day and all night.

Phi MU, along with the Alpha Epsilon Pi Fraternity, sponsored a Ping-Pong match for Muscular Dystrophy at the Union which lasted 48 hours and "netted" $1,000.

"We had people playing all through the night," said Robin Eishen, public relations officer. No wonder these blurry-eyed Ping-Pongers saw more than just one spot.

The Phi Mu sorority emphasizes higher academics and its members at chapters around the country have been awarded over 22,000 graduate and undergraduate scholarships. The sorority also publishes a professional directory which is nationally distributed. The directory lists types of jobs and is helpful with career development.

PRE-VET CLUB

"Basically, we're here so that pre-vets have an opportunity to meet and get to know each other a little bit, and to allow us to get exposure to different aspects of the veterinary profession." Such is the raison d'etre for MSU's Pre-Vet Club, according to this year's Vice-President, Adam Blickley.

The 125 members of the club attend bi-monthly meetings where guest speakers discuss current issues and areas of study in Veterinary Medicine with the future vets. According to Blickley, most of this year's speakers were veterinarians from MSU's world-renowned Vet Clinic and from abroad.

Not all of the Club's meetings are so serious though. The Pre-Vets do take time off every fall for a hayride, and every spring for a picnic; both traditions which were carried on by MSU's 1982/83 Pre-Vet Club.

SIGMA KAPPA

ΣK

The lights are dimmed at MacDonald Middle School. The band is playing and couples are swirling gracefully on the dance floor. A smiling Sigma Kappa walks up to one of the male wallflowers and asks him to dance. The gentleman nods yes, pats his silver hair into place and hands his cane to another man standing next to him. The band starts the next song and the man cocks his head, listening. "I haven't heard a real square dance caller in years. Let's go lassie!" And so the 6th Annual Sigma Kappa Senior Swirl is underway.

"We had so much fun," said Kristi Schmidt, president. "The band played square dances and waltzes, so the senior citizens were really teaching us how to dance." The house puts on the Senior Swirl every spring in conjunction with the Fiji house. All senior citizens are invited to attend and dance the night away.

The whole Sigma Kappa house also participated in the CROP-Walk for hunger in the fall and raised approximately $500.

With homework and involvement in campus organizations, such as the Tower Guard, Mortar Board, the Student Foundation and the Senior Class Council, it would seem that these women wouldn't have time for anything else. In spite of their busy schedules, this fall they bought books for the American Farm School in Greece and in the winter donated money to the Maine Seacoast Mission.

CHI OMEGA

XΩ

Everyone has heard the old joke, "How many psychiatrists, football players, etc., does it take to change a light bulb?" The women of Chi Omega prompt the question, "How many Chi Omegas does it take to drive a Volkswagen Rabbit?" They answered the question during Greek Week of '82 by stuffing 38 girls into the subcompact. Hopefully it wasn't a manual transmission; sitting on the gearshift would not be very fun. All this togetherness earned the Chi Omegas a place in the Guiness Book of World Records and helped them to go on to win the Greek Week Award for the third year in a row.

As they are one of the larger houses on campus, it is easy to find Chi Omegas in almost every activity at the University.

The house's philanthropy, which comes from the Greek word, philanthropia, meaning love of mankind, is the Glass House in Lansing. The Glass House is another name for the Women's Alcoholic Rehabilitation Center and the Chi Omegas work diligently all year to raise funds for them.

The women of Chi Omega are all very diverse, coming together to form their own unique blend of scholarship, leadership, and involvement.

ALPHA KAPPA PSI

AKΨ

The 1982/83 members of Alpha Kappa Psi are as diverse as they come. MSU's professional business fraternity is not only the sole co-ed fraternity on campus, but is also the only fraternity with faculty members amongst its ranks.

Largely a fraternity based on its members' mutual interest in the field of business, Alpha Kappa Psi periodically invites prominent individuals from the business world to speak at their meetings.

The fraternity's annual winter field trip takes members to different cities where they attend various professional events. This year, the members of Alpha Kappa Psi journeyed to Milwaukee.

Despite its definite professional slant, Alpha Kappa Psi is also a social fraternity, according to President Phil Harwood, who noted the fraternity's active involvement in MSU's Greek athletic leagues and annual Greek Week events.

EVANS SCHOLARS

Question: Who demonstrates leadership and character, was graduated in the top quarter of their high school class, has shown financial need, and can tell you if you should use your three iron or your four iron on your next shot?

Answer: An Evans Scholar.

Question: A what?

Answer: An MSU Evans Scholar. A guy or girl who was a golf caddie in high school, received a scholarship from the Western Golf Association because they had a good caddie record and had the above qualifications.

Question: Hmm. What do these Evans Scholars do?

Answer: Well, besides their studies, they're dedicated to community service. They have an annual fund raiser—which for the last two years has been a three-mile campus run—and they donate the money they raise to charities. This year, they donated it to the Mid-Michigan Center for the Blind. Oh, and they also sponsor an annual blood drive.

Question: Sounds great! How can I become one?

Answer: Heh, it's a lot of work. But here, you can start by holding this bag of clubs.

KAPPA DELTA

KΔ

Somehow, during the busy 1982/83 academic year at MSU, the women of Kappa Delta found time to dedicate themselves to a new philanthropy. In addition to their Annual Spring Golf Classic, which raises money for the Richmond, Virginia Crippled Children's Hospital, the members of Kappa Delta sponsored a new Swim-a-Thon. Proceeds from the event held Winter Term, went to the National Council for Prevention of Child Abuse.

Along with an obvious dedication to philanthropy, the women of Kappa Delta maintained a strong sense of leadership. Several members held important leadership positions in various University organizations during the year, including the Senior Class Council, Women in Communication, and The Alumni Association.

Four Kappa Delta members also held co-chairperson positions for the Greek System's annual Greek Week festivities.

The Kappa Deltas contributed further to the Week's festivities by sponsoring a pyramid building contest.

One of the University's oldest sororities, the MSU chapter of Kappa Delta was founded in 1926. This year, the sorority's 1897 national founding date was celebrated with an alumnae dinner and small ceremony.

INTER-FRATERNITY COUNCIL

Roy and Frank were typical freshmen living in Wilson at MSU. And being fairly typical, they thought they might like to join a fraternity.

Roy: "Hey Frank, this is rush week. Do you want to go and look at some of the fraternity houses?"

Frank: "Well Roy, I don't know. How did you know it was rush week anyway?"

Roy: "I took it upon myself to call the Inter-fraternity Council this afternoon. They're in charge of regulating rush and stuff like that. The guy on the phone was really nice and gave me all sorts of information."

Frank: "Oh. Well, I'd like to go, but it's kind of cold out. I don't feel like walking all that way over to some of those houses from here."

Roy: "No problem, Frank. The IFC has set up a bus service so we can ride around to any house we want. And Frank, I can tell by the look on your face what your next question is going to be."

Frank: "Oh yeah?"

Roy: "Yeah. You're going to say that the fraternity you were thinking of rushing was part of the National Panhellenic Council and in the past didn't participate in Greek Week, so what good is the IFC going to do you. Am I right?"

Frank: "Go ahead smarty pants."

Roy: "Well, you don't have to worry. An All-Greek Council has been established with members from the IFC, Panhellenic and National Panhellenic Council. And all the fraternities and sororities at MSU are now participating in Greek Week."

Frank: "Wow Roy, you're really up on Greek affairs. Let's go catch that bus to rush."

And so Frank and Roy went to rush and each found a fraternity perfectly suited to their individual needs.
